U. S. to Meet Axis-Japan Pact by Speeding Aid to Britain and China, Rushing Defense; English Shoot Down 130 Nazi Planes, Lose 34

London Repels Daytime Raids; Big Guns Duel Across Channel

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), Sept. 28. With a mighty barrage that almost smothered the sound of falling bombs, British ground guns early today fought a heavy Naxi air raid on London—the climax of a series of assaults loosed yesterday by hundreds of German planes upon all England.

Southeast London was intermittently as bright as day under the light of Nazi flares. Salvos of explosive bombs and incendiaries as well, fell in the city from southeast to northwest.

Nowhere was the antiaircraft artillery more thunderous than in the very center of the metropolis. There, too, heavy bombs came down—three in quick succession in one instance.

A Major Attack

It was a major attack, one of the heaviest in many nights. During the day the Nazis had struck again and again at London, but their great formations were broken up short of the city, said the air ministry, and the damage in London from those forays was officially declared to have been slight.

By 10:43 o'clock last night (4:43 p. m. E. S. T.), the air ministry announced, at least 130 German planes had been shot down to 34 British losses.

At almost the same time, it was declared that a recapitulation of the books of violence showed that more than 1,000 raiders had been destroyed during September—the second month in which that figure had been exceeded.

[The German high command reported in Berlin, according to United Press, that 75 British planes had been brought down during the daylight raids, that only 23 German planes were missing and that heavy damage had been done to a number of British industrial areas.]

Big Guns Duel Over Channel

To yesterday's almost endless aerial duels all about the English coast was joined one of the heaviest artillery battles of the war—a long bombardment and counter-bombardment by German and British guns across 22 miles of the Strait of Dover, during which for a time

Detroit Tigers Win Pennant

The Detroit Tigers captured the American League pennant yesterday by beating the Cleveland Indians, 2 to 0, behind the masterful pitching of Rookie Floyd Giebell, Manager Del Baker's surprise pitching choice, while the Yanks lost to the A's, 6 to 2. The newly crowned champions turned back the Tribe's No. 1 hurler, Bob Feller.

Rudy York, the Tigers' slugging first baseman, provided the winning margin by smashing a home run in the fourth inning.

The game was halted several times by the umpires as the boisterous ladies' day crowd pelted Detroit players with assorted vegetables, fruit and veteran eggs.

The Gallup Poll

68% Believe Roosevelt Will Win

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director of American Institute of Public Opinion

As an interesting sidelight on the 1940 Presidential race, the American Institute of Public Opinion has asked a cross-section of voters to make their guesses on the outcome at this time.

Voters were asked:

"Regardless of how you yourself plan to vote, who do you think will be elected President?"

Among those with more or less definite guesses, the replies were:

Think Roosevelt will win....68%
Think Willkie will win.....32%

About one voter in six (16%) said he thought the race was too close or had no opinion.

The public divides its guesses in exactly the same proportion as a group of 50 experienced Washington correspondents polled a week ago by Newsweek magazine.

The guesses of Democrats and Republicans with more or less definite opinions are as follows:

Guessing	WW	FRD
Republicans	73%	27%
Democrats	4	96

A few Republicans believe Roosevelt is almost unbeatable—despite the fact that the most recent surveys of actual voting intention show Roosevelt leading by only 55 to 45, an actual margin slighter than a superficial glance might suggest.

Treaty Implicitly Leaves Signers Free to Shape Policy on Russia

Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Sept. 27.—Germany, Japan and Italy banded together their totalitarian arms and the energies of their quarter billion people today in a ten-year pact of military and economic character, which means plainly that all three will help each other against the United States if any one of them becomes involved with America.

This stroke of authoritarian diplomacy, conceived and stage managed down to the names on the dotted lines by Adolf Hitler, was signed this afternoon in Berlin's sumptuous new chancellery by the foreign ministers of Germany and Italy and the Ambassador of Japan.

Aimed at U. S.

The treaty itself does not mention the United States.

Soviet Russia, however, is specifically named in the treaty's Article V, which says carefully that the "political status which exists now" between each of the contracting powers and the Soviet Union is in no wise affected. Germany now has a nonaggression pact with Russia.

Therefore, the United States appears to be the only other power envisaged by Article III of the pact, as follows:

"Germany, Italy and Japan . . . undertake to assist one another with all political, economic and military means when one of the three powers is attacked by a power at present not involved in the European war or in the Chinese-Japanese conflict."

As for Russia, however, and in spite of the treaty provision, she still may find herself between two fires: Japan and Germany, with Italy on the sidelines.

The pact leaves unsaid that any contracting party can change its "present" political status in reference to the Soviet Union.

In that case such a power would be free to act as it wished. Indeed, the Russian article then might not be binding on the other signatories, as well.

Hence there is no guarantee that Russia can remain out of the conflict.

Nevertheless, in the eyes of neutral observers the clearest effect of

New Airport To Open Today

After a dozen years of controversy and makeshift, Washington will come into official possession of an airport adequate to its needs today at 2:38 p. m., when President Roosevelt will dedicate National Airport at Gravelly Point.

An air parade, led by a Civil Aeronautics Board plane, will take off from three airports at 1:55 p. m. Their appearance will be the signal for President Roosevelt to leave the White House for Gravelly Point.

In the parade will be planes of three transport lines, the Army, the Navy and the Coast Guard.

New Orders Speak

Tokyo Fears 'Momentous Decisions' Lie Ahead; Italians Say U. S. Must Stand Aside or Fight

Rome Serves Notice America Must Stay Out of Old World

By the Associated Press

Rome, Sept. 27.—Exultant Fascists said in flat, undiplomatic language today that the new German-Italian-Japanese alliance would loose war on two continents against the United States if it sought to intervene to help Britain or offered any "interference" with what any of the three powers considers its own concerns.

The new accord, it was said here plainly and authoritatively, was intended to "warn" the United States to stay out of the European and Chinese-Japanese wars; to stay out of Europe, Asia and Africa—all of which the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo front expects to dominate.

Spain Reported Next

[The United Press reported from Rome that Fascist quarters predicted that an Axis pact with Spain "even more militant" than today's triple alliance with Japan and tantamount to bringing Spain into the war will be signed within a few days either in Berlin or Rome.]

The first immediate and specific intention of the Berlin-Tokyo-Rome alliance, competent sources said, was to keep the United States from

World Capitals' Reaction to Pact

WASHINGTON: It is "a situation which has long existed in effect"—Secretary of State Hull.

TOKYO: Japan will not enter the European war or attack anyone, but something may come up which will call for "momentous decisions."

ROME: The United States had better keep out of the "living spaces" of the three signatories and refrain from using Britain's Far Eastern bases, such as Singapore.

LONDON: The pact is the most momentous development since the prewar Russian-German pact, is intended to intimidate the United States, divert her attention to the Far East and curb her aid to Britain.

MADRID: It means the United States must renounce plans to "intervene" against any of the three pact signers. It brings Spain closer to the Axis.

MOSCOW: No comment.

Emperor Reassures Japan but Press Sees An 'Inevitable' Clash

By the Associated Press

Tokyo, Sept. 27.—Japan cast her lot squarely with the Rome-Berlin Axis today, but hastened to tell the world in general and the United States and Great Britain in particular that it did not mean she is going to enter the European war or pick a fight with anybody.

"But there is no telling whether there might not arise occasions and circumstances calling for momentous decisions on Japan's part," Matsuoka told the nation in a broadcast.

[A United Press dispatch from Tokyo carried reports from there that the Axis-Japan treaty carries "secret clauses" describing conditions under which any of the three powers would wage war against another power such as the United States.]

An imperial rescript, issued under the seal of the Emperor, declared that in lining up with Germany and Italy, Japan was motivated by the "fervent hope that termination of disturbances and restoration of peace will be realized as swiftly

England Sees Peril to Soviet

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 27.—The German-Italian-Japanese military alliance has opened a new phase in the world's wars—a phase of attempted intimidation of the United States, in the British view, and of grave threat to Russia, in the opinion of informed Russians themselves.

Russian sources described the Soviet Union's position as "dangerous and very grave," but said the crux of the question was whether Germany had informed Moscow in advance of the tri-power alliance, as

Motorist Trapped In Car Lives—a Lot In Five Minutes

For five long minutes last night Theodore E. Case, 22, of Silver Spring, Md., lay trapped inside an overturned sedan, fearing it would burst into flames any second.

His car was struck as it crossed Ninth and Emerson streets northwest by another car driven by the Rev. S. Nelson Schlegel, pastor of the First Reformed Church. Mr. Schlegel's car, turning Case's automobile over on its left side, had jammed the right door so that it would not open.

Case, who saw smoke circling from the engine, did not escape until Oscar J. Berg, of 4831 Ninth street, broke a side window and helped the prisoner out.

Safe at last, Case saw two badly damaged cars, an overturned lamp post and lots of broken glass. But he was not scratched. Neither was the pastor, and the car didn't burn.

Willkie Asserts Third Term Is a Menace to Democracy

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Madison, Wis., Sept. 27.—Wendell L. Willkie, in a speech here tonight in the home State of the La Follette dynasty, recalled an anti-third-term resolution adopted by the United States Senate in 1928.

Senator Robert M. La Follette was the author of that resolution, which was aimed at Calvin Coolidge and which said that a third term for any man was "unwise, unpatriotic and fraught with peril to our free institutions."

Willkie did not mention Senator La Follette by name in citing the resolution. It is felt by many that the La Follettes can swing this State one way or the other in November.

Willkie's theme tonight was that President Roosevelt was using the forms but making a "mockery" of the substance of democracy.

The Republican nominee for President cited two famous New Deal controversies to prove his charge—the Supreme Court fight of 1937 and the "purge" of 1938.

He spoke to a crowd of 15,000, a crowd made up largely of University of Wisconsin students, that packed the field house on the university campus.

He was frequently cheered but a number of the students also heckled him.

"Some four years ago," he said, "the President decided that he did not like the opinions of the Supreme Court of the United States. Now there was a perfectly constitutional

Won't Be Intimidated

Girl, 18, Frustrates Holdup Of Alexandria Loan Company

A holdup at the Old Dominion Small Loan Co. in Alexandria was frustrated yesterday by a combination of rare courage and a cool head possessed by Margaret Martin, 18, secretary.

MISS MARTIN

Alone in the office while the remainder of the staff was at lunch, the pretty George Washington High School graduate defied a bandit's command to turn over the contents of the company's cash register because she thought a pistol wielded by the thug "might have been a toy," and her courage saved the day's receipts.

Miss Martin said the bandit, about 25 years old and wearing a painter's cap, entered the office a few minutes after Chalmers E. Gearhart, manager, had gone to lunch. Informed the manager would return in a short while, he pulled a revolver and demanded the contents of the cash register.

The girl refused, and the bandit entered the business office, forcing her toward a small room in the rear. She broke free and ignored his jittery command to "stay away from that telephone," and after another attempt to intimidate the girl by threatening to strike her, the bandit fled.

Police, after hearing the girl's account of the attempted robbery, expressed the belief the bandit was an "amateur."

Send 'More of Everything, And Quickly,' Lothian Asks; American Policy Anticipated Hitler's Move, Hull Says

By William V. Nessly.
Post Staff Writer

Greater determination to aid Britain and China in their resistance to aggression, along with acceleration of the defense program, appeared last night to be the likeliest immediate American reaction to the German-Italian-Japanese military alliance.

As Lord Lothian, British Ambassador, declared after a conference with President Roosevelt that Britain's great need is for "more of everything—and quickly," there were increasing private expressions here that from the standpoint of America's interests it now had become well-nigh imperative that the English win the war.

The dramatically announced grouping of the three warring nations and its implied threat to this country was received in Washington far less dramatically, but created, nevertheless, a tenseness discernible from succeeding events here. These, in brief, were:

1. Secretary of State Hull formally declared the new alignment had been fully expected and "fully taken into account by the Government of the United States in the determining of this country's policies."

2. President Roosevelt presided at an important conference of highest officials charged with speedy realization of the Nation's total defense program.

3. Practically all of the Cabinet meeting, following and continuing for an hour and a half, was devoted to searching discussion of main problems raised for this country by the spreading conflicts on both sides of the continent.

4. Sir Walter Layton, here for the British Ministry of Supply, outlined to Mr. Roosevelt, at the conference with Lord Lothian the British production program and declared later that war preparations for a year hence will be useless unless the enemy can be held in check meanwhile. He echoed the Ambassador's plea for "speed, speed, speed" in material aid. (Story, Page 7.)

5. The President received and talked with, also, a group of 37 men and women urging immediate further assistance for the British. Chester Rowell, San Francisco editor and head of the "spontaneous crusade," said later the group was "enthusiastically encouraged."

6. The Senate voted ratification of the Havana agreement by which the 21 Americas agree to prevent transfer of sovereignty over territory on this hemisphere from one non-American country to another. (Story, Page 3.)

7. American Ambassador Steinhardt called on Foreign Minister Molotoff of Russia, and some observers here saw in his visit a move toward improved relations between the United States and Soviet governments.

President Roosevelt, displaying no perturbation over news of Japanese adherence to the European axis, replied yes and no when asked at his press conference whether the treaty had been expected here.

But Secretary of State Hull later gave reporters a prepared statement saying:

"The reported agreement of alliance does not in the view of the United States,

Japan Makes Adjournment Hopes Vanish

Alliance With Axis Raises Sentiment For Staying on Duty

By Robert C. Albright

Last hopes for a sine die adjournment were abandoned yesterday as Congress took a grave view of the German-Italian-Japanese military alliance and weighed its effect on "stay on duty" sentiment.

Leaders confined efforts for a campaign leave-taking to negotiations toward a recess, either over short three-day periods or a longer furlough until after the elections.

Moves by Vice President John Garner to adjourn Congress sine die were nullified by news of the three-power agreement. Word spread through the lobbies that Congress will "stay here." Members awaited a fresh influx of mail, demanding that they do.

Typical was the comment of Senator Thomas (Democrat), Utah, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, who often reflects the Administration view.

"Common Sense to Stay"

"This is the most serious development since the German agreement with Russia on partition of Poland," said Thomas. "No President would want the responsibility at such a time of remaining on duty alone. It is common sense that we stay."

Chairman Sol Bloom of the House Foreign Affairs Committee said there was no further thought of adjournment, and the only question remaining was one of recess. Bloom said the country "should be given the assurance that we will remain."

"Darkest Phase"

Senator Johnson (Democrat), Colorado, said the international situation "has entered its darkest phase" and adjournment "is out the window."

House and Senate Foreign Relations spokesmen said no new legis-

a preview of the Sunday Post

"The frost is on the football. The infield's turning brown. The seats in baseball orchards With fans are laden down"... and in Brooklyn the battlecry rings out once more: "Wait 'til next year!"

Only a few days more until the World Series ends one of the most eventful seasons in baseball history. And in Sunday's Post Shirley Povich looks over the balls and strikes in advance, calls 'em as he foresees 'em.

While Shirley writes about baseball for the special articles section of the Sunday Post, the sports section turns its mind seriously to football. This afternoon's games mark the real opening of the college football season, and Sunday's Post is the place to read about the big games—with special emphasis on the initial appearances of Georgetown, Maryland and Navy.

substantially alter a situation which has existed for several years. Announcement of the alliance merely makes clear to all a relationship which has long existed and to which this Government has repeatedly called attention.

"That such an agreement has been in process of conclusion has been well known for some time. That fact has been fully taken into account by the Government of the United States in the determining of this country's policies."

While the Secretary's press conference was under way Mr. Roosevelt was conferring across the street in the White House offices with defense officials he had summoned. Present were Secretary of War Stimson, Secretary of the Navy Knox, Assistant Secretary of War Patterson, Undersecretary of the Navy Forrestal, William Knudsen, in charge of defense production; Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Admiral Harold Stark, the chief of naval operations, and Gen. George C. Marshall, the Army's chief of staff. All declined to discuss their call.

The cabinet meeting was held later, with Vice President Garner, newly returned from his Texas home, attending, but aside from the information that most of the time was devoted to international problems, no word of what transpired was forthcoming.

Yesterday's developments came hard on the heels of the United States' announcement of a fresh loan of $25,000,000 to China, which for three years has been resisting Japanese invasion, and the ordering of an embargo on scrap iron and steel to all countries except Britain and countries in this hemisphere, a move expected seriously to handicap Japan's ordnance plants. Tokyo was reported embittered over the moves, which the government there held to constitute final evidence that this country will never approve the Japanese undertaking for a "new order in Asia," Tokyo-dominated.

U. S. Has Cards Left

That the United States has economic weapons still unused but available against Japan is recognized, though there was little indication yesterday that their use is presently being considered. Cutting off all Japanese-American trade would mean something of a death blow to the Japanese silk industry and seriously affect that nation's economy, it is held.

Chief cause of what immediate apprehension was expressed in the Capital yesterday over the new alliance was consideration of this country's need for importing tin and rubber. The possibility of Japan seeking to take over the Netherlands East Indies, despite prior declarations by both Washington and Tokyo that the status quo should be maintained, was not minimized in informal discussions on Capitol Hill. Such a move by the Tokyo government might have the effect, if not indeed the objective, of cutting off American supplies of those two critical materials.

Some official consideration was being given also to the possibility that Japanese army extremists might bring about an incident at Shanghai, China. Since withdrawal of British troops stationed there, Japan and the United States have been engaged in a controversy over who should patrol the portion of the International Settlement previously under control of the British.

It was certain that Presidential and State Department study would be concentrated over the week-end on the potentialities of the week's rapid-fire series of events.

Japanese Fear Grave Decisions

Echoing the words of the Emperor and the foreign minister, Foreign Office Spokesman Yakichiro Suma declared:

"We are not going to participate in the European war. We are not going to attack any country."

Suma asserted Japan had not abandoned hope of composing her differences with the United States, which preceded the signing of the new three-power pact by a day with an embargo on scrap iron, one of Japan's most needed sinews of war.

Announcement of the pact failed to stir nation-wide excitement. Newspapers went on the streets with extras, but the Japanese public read them in silence.

The press did not share the peaceful views officially proclaimed. It declared the United States now has definitely allied herself with Britain and China and one newspaper, the influential Asahi, asserted a Japanese-American clash "now seems inevitable."

Posters, printed both in Japanese and English, appeared near the United States Embassy declaring "Japan won't permit Britain or the United States to interfere in East Asia."

Suma refrained from comment on the fifth article of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo pact which states it has no bearing on existing commitments of the signatories with the Soviet Union—with whom Japan long has been at odds.

Asked if the treaty would be applied to Russia if she attacked any one of the signatories, he replied: "The treaty neither is delimited to any one country nor does it except any one country. The article is clear as it stands."

The Russian-German non-aggression pact already precludes a Soviet attack in Europe and the new pact directly mentions Russia's special position there.

Therefore mutual promises of assistance against any new enemy are considered by neutral observers here to mean only the United States.

Germany is seen as the principal gainer, since the alliance virtually assures the permanent stationing of the American fleet in the Pacific, these informants said.

Government and industrial leaders meanwhile moved for immediate application of long-prepared stringent measures to offset the American scrap iron embargo. The first move will be diversion of the bulk of available scrap within the country to the most efficient furnaces and second, an intensive collection campaign plus further restrictions on civilian use of steel.

they held she was bound to do by a clause of the prewar Russian-German nonaggression treaty.

If this was not done, unofficial sources said, the clause of the new treaty purporting to preserve the political status quo of each of the signatories as regards Russia was "lip service only" to the Russian-German pact and "the new agreement turns the anti-Comintern pact into a military alliance."

At the same time these Russian commentators acknowledged the "possiblity that the alliance was presented to Moscow prior to signature and Stalin agreed to it."

But they held that this was unlikely in view of the fact that the pact had not been announced in Moscow up to mid-evening at least. They felt that "Germany is riding so high she feels she needs no approval, save Italy's rubber stamp."

If Russia actually agreed, they said, it would be "in line with her policy of 'let the world fight and we will pick up the postwar pieces.'"

This policy, they indicated, might be behind rumors of a proposed nonaggression agreement between the U. S. S. R. and Japan which would be designed to protect Russia from war in Asia as the Russian-German accord is supposed to do in Europe.

"Admission by Germany"

One neutral diplomat saw the pact as "pitch-forking the United States into a crisis in world politics" and as "an admission by Germany that she realizes full aid is being given to Britain and that it will increase in the future to her detriment."

Thus, it was said, the Reich is "trying to force the United States to face west instead of east" and promising Japan "domination of the Pacific if she keeps America concentrated on her by warlike gestures which may, however, fall short of war."

British sources predicted that the agreement would have the effect of tightening economic cooperation between the United States and the British Empire.

Some British quarters believed that Britain, the United States and Australia might invoke joint economic retaliation against Japan.

Italians Warn America of War

allying itself with Britain or attempting to use any British bases in the Pacific, such as Singapore.

Virginio Gayda, one of the most authoritative Fascist press spokesman, declared "the new treaty threatens no one." But then he went on:

"It only warns those few adventurous or deluded persons who still are toying with plans more or less real for intervention in favor of Britain.

"It also warns those American circles who, feeling themselves protected by Roosevelt's favor, are outlining, at least in their speeches and publications, plans for intervention in a war which does not concern and cannot touch the Americas, and for interference in vital regions of Italy and Germany which do not think, on their part, of entering the vital zones and regions of the Americas.

". . . Let these circles know that their folly would find them exposed on two fronts of land and sea to a war of two entire continents and would expose them to the ruinous loss of all the position which the work of their people has won in their continent and the world."

Some informed persons here regard the new line-up as having declared a doctrine for Europe and Asia similar to the American Monroe Doctrine, in that it would attempt to exclude America from those continents.

Gayda himself, apparently taking the line that the United States was now warned effectively against intervening on Britain's side, then observed:

"England now has to choose between unconditional surrender and irreparable destruction of all which still remains of its national life and already declining power."

Meanwhile, Italy revived her territorial claims against Greece, with the announcement that three Albanians had been killed in Greece. The press referred to the alleged killings as "other scores to settle."

Japan Joins Axis in Pact Regarded as Warning to U. S.

the treaty was this: If the United States enters the European war she will be engaged immediately in the Pacific by a Japanese navy which is the third largest in the world. Thus the three powers aim to so involve the United States fleet that it would not be able to be of material assistance to Britain in the Atlantic or the Mediterranean.

In the words of Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop of the Third Reich the pact also is directed against "inciters to war" over the world an dthose states which "harbor the intention of mixing in the final phase of the solution" of problems in either Europe or East Asia.

A foreign office spokesman said flatly that among these "war inciters" is "a certain group in the United States."

Formally, the pact recognizes spheres of interest on the two sides of the world: Japan's "new order in greater East Asia" and the German-Italian "new order in Europe."

German spokesmen declined to give a precise definition of "greater East Asia."

But apparently Japan is left free to determine what are to be the deciding factors in the fate of the Dutch Eastern colonies and French Indo-China. It is not clear whether Japan is to be recognized as the master power insofar as the Philippine Islands are concerned.

Africa is not mentioned. But it must be assumed that the entire African continent is regarded as an area falling under the undisputed leadership of Germany and Italy and it must be taken for granted that Japan has recognized this.

Spain Not Mentioned

Contrary to many expectations, Spain was not even mentioned in today's ceremonies. Conjecture varied between the belief that Spain is not yet ready to mortgage her future and the conviction that both the Axis and Spain are merely waiting for a psychological moment at which to spring an announcement of alliance.

Late today Count Galeazzo Ciano, the Italian foreign minister, had a long talk with Ramon Serrano Suner, who has been in Berlin for some time as Generalissimo Franco's special envoy.

One illuminating hint as to the Axis intentions vis-a-vis Spain appeared in the Frankfurter Zeitung, whose foreign editor is close to the German foreign office. This newspaper said Spain was a "bridgehead to the South Atlantic."

It is possible that Germany, Italy and Japan are waiting to see how the South American states react to the pact of Berlin before they formally use Spain as a "bridgehead" in that direction.

The pact is effective immediately, and there will be no delay in making plans for the contingency of one of the signers being "attacked by a power at present not involved in the European war or the Chinese-Japanese conflict."

Join technical commissions will meet at once.

Before a pale, gray-clad Hitler and a full panoply of state in the familiar setting of Axis diplomacy, the gilded Hall of Ambassadors in the new Berlin chancellery, Ribbentrop said:

"This pact . . . is not directed against any other people but exclusively against those inciters to war and irresponsible elements in the rest of the world who are striving for a further lengthening out of the widening scope of this war.

"In setting this aim for the pact, the three powers, both during their negotiations and in the pact itself, are able to state to their great satisfaction that these new arrangements in nowise affect relations either already existing or in process of formation between themselves and Russia.

Peace Is the Motive

"The pact which has been signed is a military alliance between three of the mightiest states on earth. It is to serve toward bringing about a just order both within the European sphere and also in the greater Asiatic space. Above all, it is to help to bring peace to the world as quickly as possible.

"Every state which meets this bloc with the intention of helping restore peaceful relations between peoples is welcomed uprightly and gratefully and will be invited to cooperate in the political and economic reorganization. Any state, should it harbor the intention of mixing in the final phase of the solution of these problems in Europe or eastern Asia or attacking one state signatory to this three-power pact will have to take on the entire concentrated might of three nations with more than 250,000,000 inhabitants.

"This means that this pact will, in any case, help reestablish peace or war."

When Hitler entered the great chamber his face was pale and serious. Ribbentrop met him at the door, clicked his heels, saluted and said, "Mein Fuehrer, I report the signing of the German-Italian-Japanese pact."

Then the Fuehrer sat down at a fourth chair which had been slipped up to the council table, already arranged for the signatures of Ribbentrop, Count Galeazzo Ciano, of Italy, and Saburo Kurusu, the Japanese Ambassador.

When Ribbentrop had finished, the Fuehrer smiled faintly at Ciano. The latter snapped to the Fascist salute and read his own declaration, concluding with the prediction that "the final victory that . . . cannot fail to be ours . . . will be the surest pledge of a future based on justice and peace for all the peoples of the world." He spoke in Italian.

Fuehrer Watches Intently

Hitler peered intently at Ciano, his chin on his hand. When he had finished, Hitler shook hands with him, beckoned to the Japanese envoy and sat back.

Kurusu bowed suavely and spoke his own piece, embracing the philosophy that "the proper handling of the sword does not consist in unthinkingly killing human beings but in protecting them with the sword . . . I feel impelled to express the hope that this pact . . . may become a sword in the hands of a righteous warrior and will thus contribute to the reestablishment of universal peace."

The sing-song of the little man's phrases—he spoke in Japanese—seemed to fascinate the Fuehrer. His eyes glanced to Kurusu's face, then back to his hands, then back again.

After the Japanese was through, Hitler shook hands with him, again with Ciano, and left.

Among the corps of diplomats and high officials present was blue-uniformed Dr. Hans Dieckhoff, the German Ambassador to the United States, who has been home for almost two years.

Tonight Hitler awarded the Great Cross of the German Eagle to Japanese Foreign Minister Matshcka and to Kurusu. There was a big reception for the honor visitors at the Kaiserhof—attended, incidentally, by Spain's Serrano Suner.

Day of Prayer For Great Britain Set Tomorrow

Fourteen American religious leaders, including the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, have joined in a call for observance tomorrow of "Great Britain Sunday"—a day of prayer for the British.

Acting at the request of Bundles for Britain, organization of American women working for British relief, the leaders issued the following proclamation, which said, in part:

"We are united to our friends in the British Isles by the heritage of a common ideal of democracy and freedom and a common struggle to achieve it. In this hour when that heritage stands in peril we would identify ourselves in sympathy and fellowship with the British people."

Others signing the proclamation include the Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church; President Albert W. Beaven, of Colgate-Rochester Divinity (Baptist) School, Rochester, N. Y.; Dr. Samuel McCrea Cavert, general secretary of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America; President Henry Sloane Coffin, Union Theological (Presbyterian) Seminary, and the Synagogue Council of America.

Argentine Embargo End Gratifies Hull

Secretary of State Hull yesterday described the action of Argentina in terminating the embargo on United States products as an illustration of the intention of American republics to meet all problems in the spirit of mutual conciliation.

The Secretary recalled at his press conference his previous statements that the American republics would work out economic and commercial problems in a broad way as they arose from day to day. Smiling slightly, he added that he thought this statement now had been justified.

Adjournment Hopes Abandoned

Recess Is Believed Best Thing Possible In Oriental Crisis

lative moves were in prospect, but Congress will hold itself available.

Belief in this group was that the Administration will pursue unruffled the line of foreign policy already laid down toward the Far East and Europe. There was some strong sentiment for a firmer stand toward Japan, short of war.

Subject of keen speculation was the likely effect of this latest development on the current Presidential campaign. Politicians who have long believed that the election will be largely influenced by events abroad, predict the Far East situation and how it is handled will be a salient election factor, particularly in California and the Far West.

So far as current business is concerned, Senate Majority Leader Barkley has predicted that Congress can finish its work by the end of next week.

Obstacles to Recess

The conference report on the excess profits tax bill will be ready for the Senate early next week. The Senate Appropriations Committee is completing work on the final deficiency bill and will take up the $1,470,000,000 supplemental defense appropriation measure passed Thursday by the House. Demands for Senate passage of the Walter-Logan bill and sugar quota legislation might further delay any efforts at recess.

Congressional comment on the three-power pact ranged from Barkley's view that it "should be a warning to us" to Bloom's belief that it signified "weakness in the Berlin-Rome Axis."

"It has been generally understood for some time that Germany, Italy and Japan have been sympathetically maneuvering to get control of the world situation," Barkley said.

Speed in Defense Urged

Senate Majority Whip Minton called it "all the more reason why we should speed up our preparations for defense."

Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, said the alliance shows "what a grave duty we have in the United States to become strong enough for the counter-revolution, or other means of defense that must be undertaken if we are going to save the principle of self-government."

Chairman Vinson of the House Naval Affairs Committee said the agreement reflected "what has been practically going on for three years."

Pittman Is Silent

Chairman Pittman, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, who has warned frequently that the three powers were working together, declined comment on yesterday's developments. He formerly has urged a general embargo on all shipments to Japan.

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, said "it ought not to make the slightest difference in our policy because our policy ought to be to stay out of war."

Senator Thomas said the United States "should proceed carefully" and before taking any action should determine Japan's intentions toward the Dutch East Indies, where this country gets its tin and rubber.

Bloom said that for the moment he thought the United States should "do nothing." He said he thought the agreement was "an attempt to lure Russia back to the fold.

British Battle Big Nazi Raid

German shells fell upon the Dover area at the rate of one every two minutes.

Bombs were dropped now and again on London during the day by groups of Nazi planes able to break through the outer defenses, but the great actions were fought out along the English coasts.

One single such battle, visible to men and women in southwest London, involved at least 100 planes. The skies were dotted black with bursting anti-aircraft shells and an occasional column of oily smoke from a crippled craft.

120 Planes in First Attack

Before noontime, three mighty, separate thrusts had been made at London. In the first of these alone, no less than 120 German planes took part. The southeast and southwest coasts were heavily attacked; in the southwest a formation of 60 bombers assaulted a single town.

British fighters sought to block the airlanes all along the southern coast and British bombers, at the very height of the day's action, went out across the Channel to pour explosives again upon the Nazi gun emplacements and ports on the French side.

It was only one more assignment in a commission that now never really ends: To smash up the Nazi springboards of invasion as fast as they can be built or repaired.

Kiel Attacked Again

Last night and earlier today the Royal Air Force, riding now familiar aerial routes, attacked the German naval base at Kiel, leaving great uames spanning it on both sides, the air ministry said, and reported a belief that two ships had been hit.

Aside from this, the French coast was left aflame in many sections, and British bomb flashes were declared to have risen even above the glare of Nazi searchlights.

Other targets heavily hit, the British said, were a new aqueduct and the lock gates in the Dortmund-Ems Canal, a vital communication from the Industrial Ruhr to the North Sea, the autobahn (high-speed motor road) west of Andermunde.

Among the Nazi-held ports, Le Havre was declared particularly hard hit, with scores of bombs falling on the railway quay, the basin and docks, causing fires visible 40 miles away.

[The New York Times reported these R. A. F. raids extended along 500 miles of Nazi-held European coast. This dispatch also said the 26,000-ton German battleship Scharnhorst was at Kiel when bombs were being dropped there.]

As to the attack on Kiel, one returning pilot was quoted by the air ministry:

"I've seen lots of fires in my time but those at Kiel want a lot of beating."

Thursday nights raids on England were acknowledged here to have left considerable damage in the Liverpool port and shipbuilding areas; in residential Southampton, site of an important naval base, and in the northwest.

Spitfire Plant Reported Hit

[The German high command declared that Britain's Spitfire assembly plant near Southampton had been squarely hit and "tremendous destruction" wrought; that armament plants were bombed in central England; locks and merchant ships hit at Liverpool.]

The greatest German daylight aerial assaults today were in four waves—three directed at London and another at the Bristol area.

Over London there were dogfights all day long, while thousands watched and cheered the defenders. Stores, homes and churches were among the structures smashed.

Illustrating the official view that the defense of the metropolis was extraordinarily successful, the air ministry declared that of 180 German planes that crossed the Kentish coast in the day's first big offensive wave only 30—all fighters—got through to London, the bombers having been turned back.

One of the most dramatic incidents of the day was reported from the coast near Beachy Head. Watchers there saw a British pilot apparently deliberately ram a German Junkers plane, tearing off its tail, at the cost of his own life.

Hull Commended By Single Taxers In Session Here

A resolution, commending Secretary of State Cordell Hull for his "fight for free trade and its corollary, world peace" was adopted yesterday at the closing session of the fifteenth annual Henry George Congress, at the Washington Hotel.

Mayor Cornelius D. Scully, of Pittsburgh, a speaker at the closing banquet last night, advocated the single tax as "a preventative for a totalitarian economy, either Nazi or Communist."

George E. Evans, a member of the Pittsburgh city council and president of the Henry George Foundation, discussed the greater tax law of Pittsburgh, based on the principle of the single tax.

Among guests at the banquet was Anna George de Mille, daughter of Henry George.

TO MEN OF MILITARY AGE

With the passing of the Conscription Bill, men of ages 21 to 35 inclusive are subject to military service. While the selective method which is to be used will not affect every one of you men between these ages, it undoubtedly has made some of you hesitant about your automobile purchases. In the history of the CAPITOL CADILLAC CO. we have often risen to meet unusual circumstances. We meet them again with a new policy, designed to eliminate any undue financial burden on those who may be drawn into military service:

A Defense Co-operation Money-Back Certificate will be issued to men of military age on purchases, for personal use, made up to and including December 15, 1940. New 1941 Cadillacs, Oldsmobiles and used automobiles of all makes and accessories may be purchased on this plan. In the event that you are conscripted and actually enter into the service on or before January 31, 1941, this certificate, with your notice of call, will entitle you to the privilege of returning your entire purchase for full credit, regardless of wear.

Our first consideration in this move has been for you young men between 21 and 35 who are subject to conscription. As one of WASHINGTON'S largest and leading automobile dealers we are proud to be first with this timely service. You may come to CAPITOL CADILLAC CO. and buy your automobile, new or used, with the utmost confidence that you will not incur a needless expenditure.

Senate Ratifies Treaty of Havana

Voice Vote Affirms Pact for Preventing Transfer of Islands

By John B. Oakes

With brief debate, the Senate yesterday ratified the Havana pact by which the 21 republics of the Western Hemisphere agree to prevent the transfer of any European colony in the Americas to another non-American state.

By the Senate action, the United States became the second nation to ratify the agreement, which was signed at Havana by Secretary Hull and the foreign ministers of the other republics on July 30. Costa Rica was the first nation formally to ratify.

The agreement, entitled "Convention on the Provisional Administration of European Colonies and Possessions in the Americas," declares that the American republics will not recognize any attempted transfer of sovereignty of an area from one non-American state to another.

"Provisional Regime"

If such an attempt is made, one or more of the American states shall establish a "provisional administrative regime" in the territory, under supervision of the "Inter-American Commission for Territorial Administration" which is set up by the convention. The commission will have a representative from each ratifying State.

The only European possessions in this hemisphere belong to Holland, France and Great Britain.

25 Senators on Floor

Chairman Pittman of the Foreign Relations Committee briefly explained the operation of the agreement to a Senate that had only some 25 members on the floor.

Declaring he was doubtful if the move was wise, Senator Taft suggested that the convention would put "our defenses in the power of a combination of other American governments which may not agree with us."

However, there was no audible dissent when the Senate approved the convention by voice vote just before quitting for the day.

President Plans Defense Tour In Md. Monday

President Roosevelt announced yesterday that he would inspect key defense establishments in Maryland on Monday.

The Chief Executive said he would leave Washington tonight by boat, traveling down the Potomac and up the Chesapeake Bay, arriving at Aberdeen Proving Ground Monday morning. After inspecting the post, principal ordnance establishment in the United States, the President expects to visit the Chemical Warfare Arsenal at Edgewood, the Martin Aircraft plant and Fort George G. Meade.

Gov. O'Conor, of Maryland, will meet Mr. Roosevelt at Aberdeen and accompany him on the tour. The President is then expected to return to Washington from Fort Meade by motor.

Asked whether the trip had any political significance, Mr. Roosevelt told reporters to figure it out for themselves.

Gov. O'Conor said in Annapolis, the Associated Press reported, that White House aides had informed him the President planned to make another trip into Maryland later, visiting other key defense posts.

He declared that no formal luncheon was planned for the President, nor will O'Conor wear formal clothes, as he considers the visit a "business affair."

The Governor said he planned to take with him Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, adjutant general of the Maryland National Guard, and a few others of his military staff.

Critic of Radio Speech Fights Test at Gallinger

Chambers R. Porterfield, 73-year-old retired Treasury employe who claims that his violent remarks about a radio speech do not justify committing him for mental observation, is due to have his innings in the District Court today.

Porterfield drank some wine Tuesday night, which his lawyer, Josiah Lyman, said "went to his head." Standing in front of his home, 3306 Ross place northwest, where he has lived 33 years, Porterfield discussed a radio program he had just heard with emphasis but no restraint. No one yesterday could recall what the program was.

Arrested by Officer J. W. Carroll, of No. 8 Precinct, Porterfield pleaded guilty before Police Judge Hobart Newman Wednesday. Judge Newman postponed sentence for 30 days and ordered the man examined at Gallinger. Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat of the District Court granted Porterfield a temporary writ of habeas corpus and Justice Jesse C. Adkins ordered the man released on $100 bond pending hearing on the writ today.

Don't 'Embarrass' Willkie, Democrats Retort to G. O. P.

A Republican demand for action on the proposed Smith amendments to the Wagner Act yesterday evoked a Democratic retort that such a move "might embarrass Mr. Willkie."

A request that the Senate Committee on Education and Labor act on the proposed alterations was addressed to Chairman Elbert Thomas by Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, who offered some amendments of his own.

"In view of Mr. Willkie's indorsement of the Wagner Act," commented Democratic Senator Thomas, "it might embarrass him to bring out amendments. I don't want to divide the Republican Party at this time—that would be hardly cricket."

Carmody Is Afraid Willkie Will Claim He Wrote Utility Law

By the Associated Press

John M. Carmody, Federal Works administrator, suggested yesterday "in the name of simple charity" that Wendell L. Willkie's speaking campaign be ended "before he claims authorship of the Holding Company Act and the Declaration of Independence."

CARMODY

Carmody sent this telegram to Gov. R. L. Cochran of Nebraska:

"Lost somewhere in Nebraska tired hoarse man. When last heard from over radio was stumbling badly through what seemed to be unfamiliar economic underbrush. Understood him to say he is candidate for Presidency of the the United States. In lucid moments indorsed New Deal agricultural and relief programs. Claimed to be author of Rural Electrification program. Wonder what the grand old statesman of Nebraska, Senator Norris, will say to that. . . . In the name of simple charity help him home before he claims authorship of the Holding Company Act and the Declaration of Independence. Think somebody said his name was Willkie."

President Roosevelt told a press conference yesterday he had forecast the outcome of the November election and the prediction was in a sealed envelope in his desk.

Then, with a smile, he added that he always underestimated things.

(After the 1936 election, Mr. Roosevelt disclosed that in January, his forecast had been 325 electoral votes for the Democratic ticket and 260 for the Republican; on June 5, it was 315 to 216; on August 2, Mr. Roosevelt revised his prediction to "F. D. R., 340; A. M. L., 191." On the Sunday before the revision, he made it "F. D. R., 360; A. M. L., 171." The actual electoral vote was 523 for Roosevelt; 8 for Alf M. Landon, of Kansas.)

Providence, R. I., Sept. 27 (U.P.)—Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, wife of the Rhode Island Governor, was urged to speak after the G. O. P. convention renominated her husband today.

From a gallery seat she said: "If any of you hear of any sourpuss Republicans talking down their noses this defeatism, don't take a word of it. I say it's spinach—and to hell with it."

Representative Johnson (Democrat), of Oklahoma, said yesterday friends had suggested him for the position of secretary of the Democratic National Committee but that he was not interested because I have too many other things to do."

Johnson, head of the Democratic Congressional campaign speaker's bureau, said he had accepted an invitation to address a Democratic rally at Morgantown, W. Va., tonight.

Willkie Recalls Roosevelt 'Purge' method by which he could change the court.

"But the President wanted to observe the forms of democracy, but not the substance."

After describing the President's abortive attempt to remove judges who were 70 or more, Willkie said.

"Yet in the last six months, the President has appointed to a cabinet post which calls for utmost vigor—he has appointed a man beyond the age which he set in the case of the court."

This smash at the appointment of 74-year-old Henry L. Stimson to the War Department post evoked a burst of applause.

Commenting on the failure of the President's attempt to purge those Senators who voted against the court bill, Willkie said:

"The President was going through the mockery of pretending that Congress was independent, while seeking to put it under the control of the executive.

"They Still Have a Reichstag"

"If that purge hadn't failed, we would have had the form left, but certainly not the substance.

"Why, do you know that in Germany they still have a Reichstag. Yes, the form is there but the substance is gone."

Traveling across the tall-corn plains of Iowa today, Willkie warned a crowd in Dubuque that religion and education are the first to suffer under a dictatorship.

Dubuque, a city famed for its Catholic institutions of learning, has been overwhelmingly Democratic.

"If the American people have found the indispensable man," the Republican nominee for President told an enthusiastic crowd, "then I will tell you what some of the consequences will be.

"Germany found the indispensable man and the first thing to go were the churches and the schools. Any clerical man will tell you that the first thing to disappear when dictatorship comes is the right to freedom of worship."

In Dubuque, Willkie gave a demonstration of his technique in handling a crowd he knows to be predominantly Democratic.

"I am told that this town normally votes Democratic two to one," he said. "I hope that there are a great many Democrats in this audience, because I want to talk to them, reason with them."

Refers to Jefferson

He then talked about Jefferson; about the Virginian's belief that authority should be diffused among the States and not concentrated in Washington; about his warning against a third Presidential term.

"Now, if there are any disciples of Jefferson here," he said, "I don't see why you should vote against me."

He talked about Andrew Jackson, and Jackson's zeal for keeping the Federal Government out of debt. He talked about Grover Cleveland, William Jennings Bryan and Woodrow Wilson. All of them, he recalled, were opposed to too much power for the Federal Government and to a third term.

After naming each of these, Willkie would say that he didn't see how any of their disciples among the Democrats could vote against him in November.

Finally, he got down to 1932 and the name of Franklin D. Roosevelt. He recalled that President Roosevelt in that year had indorsed a statement by Wilson that there was no such thing in America as an indispensable man.

"And now," Willkie concluded, "I don't see how any disciples of Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932 could vote against me."

Willkie, though he was addressing farmers throughout the day, did not talk about farm problems.

In the last week or so, it has been noticeable that Willkie has toned down his remarks about President Roosevelt. He no longer refers to him as "this fellah." Neither does he make remarks about the President's Groton-Harvard accent. The words "spinach," "gold brick," and the like, also have disappeared from his speeches.

He says that Mr. Roosevelt's motives are undoubtedly noble, that it is the President's actions that he is concerned about. Then he takes a crack at the group around the President, the so-called "palace guard," the "intimate advisers who frequently become more ambitious to retain power than the man who occupies the office and holds the power."

3d Term Means War to Barton, In Senate Race

Unanimously Chosen By New York G.O.P. To Oppose Sen. Mead

By the Associated Press

White Plains, N. Y., Sept. 27.—Representative Bruce Barton, unanimously nominated for United States Senatorship today by the New York State Republican convention, told shouting delegates he was "unqualifiedly persuaded that the third term means war."

"American boys will be sent east and west to police the world and risk their lives, or lay down their lives, not by hundreds or by thousands, but by hundreds of thousands," he declarpd in his acceptance address.

"These are solemn and terrible words," he said. "I utter them with considered judgment and with a full sense of their implication.

Barton said the American people must decide in six weeks "whether they will gamble with their liberties by electing a President for a third term."

Barton, the indicated choice of Republican Presidential candidate Wendell L. Willkie to oppose Senator James M. Mead, ardent New Dealer, was picked to spearhead a drive to swing New York's 47 electoral votes to Willkie.

Willkie will address the convention delegates at 8 p. m. (E. S. T.) at a party rally at the Empire City Race Track, Yonkers, where officials today expanded seating facilities to accommodate 45,000. The address will be broadcast in New York State and in Washington, D. C., over the N. B. C. Red Network.

The importance of the State in the November balloting was emphasized by State Senator Joe R. Hanley, permanent chairman, who said it was "hard to conceive winning this election without carrying this State."

The "No-Third-Term" theme also was stressed by Representative Joseph W. Martin, national chairman, and Thomas E. Dewey, New York district attorney, and Frank Gannett, Rochester. Dewey and Gannett made their first political appearances since bowing to Willkie in the Presidential nomination race.

Total Force

Axis, Japan Stand On 3 Powerful Legs

By the Associated Press

On land, at sea, and in the air the new German-Italian-Japanese alliance presents one of the most forceful combinations in history.

Authoritative semiofficial figures indicate that together the three Axis governments command trained armies of some 20,000,000 men, air forces of possibly 35,000 war planes and fleets aggregating more than 2,000,000 tons.

The figures:

Land forces, including reserves—Germany, 6,000,000; Italy, 7,500,000, and Japan, 6,500,000.

Air—Germany, 25,000 planes; Italy, 6,000; Japan, 4,000.

Sea—Germany, 400,000 tons afloat, including five or six conventional and "pocket" battleships; Italy, 550,000 tons, including six battleships; Japan, 1,100,000 tons, and 10 to 12 battleships.

Chicago to Extradite Woman in Check Case

Gloria Gay Finley, 24, yesterday was ordered returned to Chicago, where she is accused of passing a $40 "short" check.

Chief Justice Wheat agreed with Assistant District Attorney Arthur B. Caldwell the merits of the case could not be considered here, declining to consider Miss Finley's claim that she has made an offer to pay the money.

Poll Books Burned in N. J., Tobey Asserts

Action, However, Termed Legal In Jersey City

Revelation that 1937 poll books, wanted for an investigation of purported voting irregularities in New Jersey, had been burned came yesterday as the dispute between Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, and Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City continued.

Senator Tobey told the Senate he had been informed of the destruction of the books, which, he said, might have been valuable in proving that "a phoney vote" had been scheduled in Jersey City. In that city, however, it was said that the books had been destroyed under a law which permits destruction of such documents after two years.

Hague, in another development, challenged Tobey's right to sit on the Senate subcommittee assigned to investigate charges of registration roll "padding" in Hudson County (Jersey City).

In a telegram to Chairman Gillette, of Iowa, of the committee, the mayor said that "publicity arising from Senator Tobey's charge that influence kept him from sitting in New Jersey as a committee of one and his intimation that I was responsible in bringing influence to bear to keep him out of New Jersey should disqualify him from sitting as a member of your committee."

In reply, Tobey declared:

"Tell him to rage, storm and thunder all he pleases. Despite it all, Tobey will be a member of the committee and will be in New Jersey when the hearing opens on October 15 and, as far as he is concerned, will make a thorough, honest and impartial investigation of existing conditions there."

Draft to Skip Key Workers in Luxury Trades

By John G. Norris

Post Staff Writer

Deferment from the draft of key workers in industry will not be confined to defense plants, conscription officials said yesterday, but may extend to such vocations as perfume makers, movie actors and big-league ball players.

Maj. Joseph F. Battley, adviser on occupational deferments to selective service headquarters, said plans for the draft contemplated the deferment of essential workers in "luxury" and other nondefense industries as well as arms plants, and revealed he was recommending that draft calls in agricultural areas be delayed wherever they might interfere with harvesting or spring planting.

He emphasized, however, that all deferment of "essential" workers would be left in the hands of local draft boards for individual determination and that the deferment would last only until the man could be replaced.

Meanwhile, it appeared likely that the appointment of a director of selective service might go to a civilian, perhaps Louis Johnson, former Assistant Secretary of War. Speculation had previously centered around two Army officers, Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion and Lieut. Col. Lewis B. Hershey.

Maj. Battley explained at a press conference that he was recommending three occupational deferment classifications. They are: Class 2a, college students, specifically deferred by law until June, 1941; class 2b, men necessary to maintenance of the "national health, safety and interest" in activities not considered of importance to national defense, and class 2c, such essential persons in defense industries.

Selective service officials believe, he said, that men who cannot be immediately replaced in any industry without disrupting business should be deferred until a man with dependents or who is outside the draft age limits can be groomed to take his place.

For example, Battley explained, drafting a highly skilled perfume-blender who could not be replaced immediately, might force a shutdown of the plant. Or calling a professional baseball or football star might wreck his team's pennant hopes, while the drafting of a movie star during the filming of a picture would prevent its completion.

Local draft boards will have full authority to defer calling such men, he made plain, and added that a liberal policy is recommended in such cases. Employers, however, must replace all deferred men as soon as possible, in both defense and nondefense industries.

State advisers are being appointed to help attain uniform occupational deferment standards, Maj. Battley said, and the local boards will also have the assistance of regional committees on such deferments. Capt. G. Tinsley Garnett will be the District of Columbia adviser, while Maj. Paul K. Klaesius and Lieut. Ellery R. Fosdick will perform such duties in Maryland and Lieut. Col. George C. Graeter and Capt. George H. Ross will be the Virginia advisers.

Government workers probably will be treated just as are other workers, with key workers being placed in Classes 2b and 2c. Policemen and firemen probably will be deferred in Class 2b, with the local boards having the say as to whether they should be replaced from civil service rolls.

Roosevelt Names 85 New Generals

Key Posts Shifted In Record Peacetime Mass Promotion

President Roosevelt gave the Army 85 additional generals yesterday to lead the Nation's expanding land forces.

Making the largest mass promotion of high ranking officers in peacetime history, the Chief Executive sent the name of 113 senior militarymen to the Senate for confirmation as general officers or promotion in those grades.

The appointments are being made under a recent law authorizing newly organized brigades and divisions as well as many special posts of growing importance.

Key Commands Shuffled

A widespread reshuffling of key military commands accompanied the promotions. The additional 85 generalships created give the Army a total of 187 officers in the permanent or temporary grades of brigadier general or higher.

At the same time, the War Department announced the appointment of two ranking officers to command two of the four field armies. Maj. Gen. Herbert J. Brees, commander of the Eighth Corps Area, will succeed Lieut. Gen. Stanley D. Embick as Third Army commander and Maj. Gen. Ben Lear will relieve Lieut. Gen. Stanley H. Ford in command of the Second Army. Embick and Ford are due for retirement in January.

While holding the senior commands, Brees and Lear will take rank as lieutenant generals.

Another order sent Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short from command of the First division, Fort Hamilton, N. Y. to Columbia, S. C. to supervise the training of troops at Fort Jackson, S. C. and organize three divisions into a tactical army corps.

Benedict Advanced

Heading the list of promotions was the advancement of Brig. Gen. Jay L. Benedict, now superintendent of the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, to be a major general and command another of the new army corps. Brig. Gen. Adna R. Chaffee, commander of the armored corps, was promoted to major general, as were 13 other brigadiers who either head divisions or soon will be ordered to such posts.

They are Brig. Gens. Henry C. Pratt, Philip B. Peyton, Joseph M. Cummins, Karl Truesdell, Jacob L. Devers, Charles F. Thompson, Jonathan M. Wainwright, James L. Collins, Joseph W. Stilwell, Lloyd R. Fredenhall, Bruce Magruder, Charles L. Scott, and Robert C. Richardson. The latter now heads the Cavalry School and is scheduled to command a second Cavalry division to be organized. Gen. Devers now commands the Washington provisional brigade, while all of the others except Gens. Wainwright, Collins and Fredenhall command divisions.

Besides the long list of command posts, a number of promotions were announced for officers holding important staff or procurement posts. Brig. Gen. Edward M. Watson, President Roosevelt's aide, was advanced to major general, while Col. James H. Burns, executive to the Assistant Secretary of War, was advanced to major general. Both of the deputy chiefs of staff, Brig. Gens. William Bryden and Richard C. Moore, were made major generals, as was Brig. Gen. Lesley J. McNair, chief of staff of general headquarters here.

London Attaches Boosted

The military and air attaches to London, Cols. Raymond E. Lee and Martin F. Scanlon, were made brigadiers, "to give more prestige to these important positions," it was said.

Five Air Corps brigadiers were advanced to major generals to head new air districts to be established. They are Brig. Gens. James E. Chaney, Frederick L. Martin, Barton K. Yount, George H. Brett and Jacob E. Fickel. The latter three are now assistant chiefs of Air Corps here.

Three other new posts to be known as "coastal frontier defense commanders" were disclosed. Brig. Gens. Frederick H. Smith, Henry T. Burgin and Thomas A. Terry were promoted to major general and listed for the assignments.

Brig. Gen. Edmund L. Daley, commander of the Puerto Rican Department, was promoted to major general, while Col. Richard Donovan was named Eighth Corps Area commander and Col. John P. Smith, Fourth Corps Area commander, both taking rank as brigadiers.

Goes to West Point

Col. Harvey D. Higley was named superintendent of West Point and promoted to brigadier general.

Other officers promoted to brigadier general were:

Air Corps wing commanders—Cols. Henry B. Clagett, John P. Curry, Jacob H. Rudolph, Walter H. Frank, Douglas B. Netherwood, Lewis H. Brereton, Follett Bradley, Clarence L. Tinker and Millard F. Harmon, jr.

Medical Department—Cols. William L. Sheep, Albert G. Love and Wallace DeWitt.

Ordnance Department—Cols. James K. Crain, John B. Rose, Richard H. Somers, Burton O. Lewis, Gladeon M. Barnes and Levin H. Campbell, jr.

Quartermaster Corps—Cols. James L. Frink, Henry D. Munnikhuysen and Frank F. Scowden.

Air Corps—Cols. Davenport Johnson, Carl Spaatz, Herbert A. Dargue and Oliver P. Echols.

Assistant chiefs of branches—Cols. Howard M. Snyder (inspector general), William V. Carter (adjutant general), Clarence L. Bjurdevant (Engineers), Dawson Olmstead (Signal Corps).

Panama Canal—Governor, Col. Glen E. Edgerton, and chief health officer, Col. Morrison C. Stayer.

Chiefs of staff of field armies—Cols. Francis B. Wilby (First), Edmund L. Gruber (Third) and Arthur W. Lane (Fourth).

School commandants—Cols. Robert C. Rodgers (Cavalry), Frank S. Clark (Coast Artillery), Rush B. Lincoln (Air Corps Technical School).

Air Corps training centers—Cols. Gerald C. Brant, Walter C. Weaver and Henry W. Harms.

Ports of embarkation—Cols. John C. H. Lee and Homer M. Croninger.

War Department—Cols. Harry K. Rutherford (executive for industrial planning), John H. Hester (executive for reserve affairs) and Eugene Reybold (assistant chief of staff, G-4).

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MULTIMILLIONAIRE AND BRIDE—Vincent Astor, yachtsman, and Mary B. Cushing, sister of the former Mrs. James Roosevelt, were married yesterday at East Hampton, N. Y. They were pictured recently at an indoor tennis match in Madison Square Garden.

Mary Cushing, Vincent Astor Wed 23 Days After His Divorce

By Mary Elizabeth Plummer
Associated Press Staff Writer

East Hampton, N. Y., Sept. 27.—Tall, slender Mary Cushing, one of the three daughters of the late Dr. Harvey Cushing, famous brain surgeon, is the new Mrs. Vincent Astor—bearer of a family name prominent in America since the days when the first John Jacob Astor made a fortune in furs.

She was married today at her mother's home in this peaceful Long Island seaside resort to that Astor's 49-year-old great-great-grandson—a multimillionaire yachtsman and largest single owner of New York real estate. The bride is in her early thirties.

Twenty-three days after the first Mrs. Vincent Astor, a leading New York music patron, obtained a divorce in Wyoming, ending a marriage of 26 years, the brief, simple ceremony took place in a living room overlooking the ocean.

In the same room the bride's younger sister, Barbara, was married a week ago to Stanley Mortimer, jr., a distant relative of the Roosevelt family.

Another sister, Mrs. Betsy Cushing Roosevelt, former wife of President Roosevelt's son, James, was at the wedding today with her two small daughters, Sarah and Kate.

So quiet were the arrangements that few residents of East Hampton knew of the marriage until Astor and his bride had left for a ten-day cruise on his yacht Nourmahal, which was anchored off Montauk.

Astor's father, John Jacob Astor 2d, died in the Titanic disaster in 1912. Vincent Astor's inheritance was $75,000,000.

Last Rites Today For Glen Howard, G. P. O. Employe

Glen P. Howard, Government Printing Office supervising proofreader, who was for many years a Florida newspaper editor, died suddenly early yesterday at his residence, 406 Delafield place northwest. He was 54.

Mr. Howard was born in 1886 in Harlan, Iowa, and there served in various public offices before moving to Florida. In the Southern State he edited the Citrus County Chronicle.

He came to Washington eight years ago to join the G. P. O. force. He was a Mason.

Mr. Howard leaves his wife, his mother, Mrs. Lillian Deen, New Brunswick, N. J.; two sisters, Mrs. C. E. Partch, also of New Brunswick, and Mrs. William Holmes, Chicago, and a son, Robert Howard, a New York newspaperman.

Funeral services will be conducted at 8 p. m. today at the S. H. Hines funeral chapel, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest. The body will be taken to Harlan, Iowa, for burial.

Geo. H. Felt Dies; Rites Monday for Masonic Leader

George H. Felt, 76, past master of Myron M. Parker Masonic Lodge, died yesterday at his home, 2629 Thirty-ninth street northwest, after a brief illness.

He was born in Brooklyn, Mich., and came to Washington in 1900 when he entered the banking business. For 30 years until he retired in 1933 he was employed by the American Security & Trust Co. He was a past worthy patron of Columbia Chapter of the Eastern Star.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Flather Felt, of Washington, and a son, Edwin H. Felt, of Chicago.

Funeral services will be at the Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest, Monday at 10 a. m. with burial in Rock Creek Cemetery.

150 Candidates To Be Baptized Here Tomorrow

Their path strewn with harmony by the Heavenly Echo Chorus and the Cross Choir, more than 150 candidates will be baptized by Elder Lightfoot Solomon Michaux tomorrow night in Griffith tSadium.

Their baptism will take place in a large tank in the center of the ball diamond into which the Fire Department will pump water from the river.

Last year 25,000 attended the baptism and heard the Cross Choir of 156 voices illustrating the story of the Passion. This year motion pictures will be made of the service.

Reed Puts Brake on Senate Clerk's Rapid-Fire Reading

John C. Crockett, veteran chief clerk of the Senate, is known far and wide for his ability to read legislation rapidly when the occasion requires. Yesterday he was slowed up, probably for the first time, but it took a quorum call to do it.

CROCKETT

REED

The Senate was acting on the consent calendar, whereby unobjected-to bills are passed as rapidly as their titles can be read. Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, was in the chair.

"Mr. President," said white-haired Senator Reed (Republican), of Kansas, "the clerk is reading so fast that I can't tell what's going on."

Senator Reed, who has been in the Senate less than two years, asked that the procedure be slowed up so he would know whether or not a bill had been adopted or passed over.

"The clerk will read," directed Senator Johnson.

And John Crockett continued to grind out the bills.

Senator Reed rose again for a second and more emphatic protest and warned the presiding officer that unless the clerk slowed down he was going to make a point of no quorum after the title of each bill had been read.

Shocked at such an unconventional protest, Majority Leader Barkley and several other Democratic Senators came to Crockett's defense. They argued that it was customary to speed up the consent calendar bills and that Senators were expected to examine them before they were called up.

After Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, had stated that the Senate would act on only a few of the scores of bills on the calendar if it waited for one Senator to examine them, Senator Reed asked for a quorum call.

Thereafter the reading clerk slowed down to a walk and Senator Johnson repeated the customary pronouncement that the bill has gone through the required preliminary procedure. And the Senators grinned.

Strike Looms At Bethlehem Defense Plants

Hillman Promises Every Effort for Amicable Solution

Every effort will be made to settle amicably a dispute that threatens the first strike in the national defense program, Sidney Hillman, defense commission member for labor and employment, declared last night.

The dispute involves the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, which employs 115,000 workers in its plants and shipbuilding yards and holds more than $1,000,000,000 in preparedness contracts.

However, Philip Murray, C. I. O. vice president and chief of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, and John Green, president of the Marine and Shipyard Workers (C. I. O.), announced a special meeting of the labor organization's chiefs in Pittsburgh next Thursday. Accusations of widespread labor discriminations by the steel firm will be considered they said.

Pay Scales at Issue

Both men conferred with Hillman following their call for the Pittsburgh meeting, and were told by the defense commissioner that he would seek an amicable settlement of the S. W. O. C.'s differences with Bethlehem.

"Every single, solitary phase of Bethlehem operations" and its treatment of employes, their pay scales and working conditions, will be discussed at Pittsburgh, Murray said at the United Mine Workers building, Fifteenth and I streets northwest.

Walsh-Healey Act Involved

Should charges of violations of the Walsh-Healey Act, covering minimum wage rates for steel workers, be substantiated, a strike may follow, the vice president indicated.

Since a "considerable number" of Bethlehem's 115,000 steel and shipyard workers are C. I. O. members, a strike call would tie up all branches of the company, Murray asserted.

The labor head said the decision to call the meeting was precipitated by requests from four separate plants seeking permission from national headquarters to strike.

These, he said, are the steel plants at Lackawanna, N. Y.; Johnstown, Pa.; Alameda, Calif., as well as the Sparrows Point, Md., branch, which combines a steel mill and shipbuilding operations.

Approximately 3,500 workers are already on strike at the Sparrows Point plants, Murray stated.

Fifteen strikers from the Maryland shipyard testified about the steel corporation's wage scale, crux of the dispute. Welders, riggers, pipefitters in turn recited their former hourly pay after Murray had charged that the company had failed to put into effect the 62½-cent basic hourly rate governing public contracts.

Wants President to Act

In a "mysterious incentive" system, bonuses are added to basic rates well below the 62½-cent scale, the official declared. The system is so complicated workers do not know what they will be paid until they receive their checks on pay day, he said.

Several workers quoted "hiring pay" (before addition of bonuses) as low as 52 cents.

When Green was asked what specific action he wished the Government to take, Murray interposed: "We want the President to issue an executive order compelling Bethlehem to comply with the labor policy set up for people receiving public contracts."

Green named shipyards in Fore River, Boston, and New York as Bethlehem subsidiaries whose labor forces include large C. I. O. percentages. Should these yards be struck, more than 13,000 workers would be affected, Green said.

Green reported a six-point program of adjustments sought by labor representatives which, he said, management refused to consider. The six points were payment of a 62½-cent hourly wage for unskilled workers and rate of $1 for skilled employes; "stipulated" work weeks, indicating hours worked; time and half for Saturday work, double time for Sundays and holidays, 5 per cent bonus for night shifts and seniority rights in hiring.

Pickets Close Two Mills

Aliquippa, Pa., Sept. 27 (AP).—The Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation reported today a labor dispute and C. I. O. dues collecting pickets had caused suspension of operations in two mills of its plant here.

A company spokesman, who said the work stoppage was in "violation of the union contract," reported approximately 900 men were affected in the seamless tube mill and the round mill.

The rod mill, employing approximately 300 men, was closed at first, but resumed operations when workers from other mills were shifted to the mill.

Medical Society To Name Doctors To Check Draftees

The District Medical Society announced yesterday it will supply two doctors to make physical examinations in each of Washington's 24 draft districts. The announcement followed a conference between Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, draft head for the Capital, and the society's medical resources committee.

Forty-eight volunteer physicians will be selected for physical examination duties, 24 "regulars" and a like number of alternates. All must be outside draft age and reside in the districts to which they are assigned.

U. S. May Peg Prices of Vital Defense Metals

Henderson Issues Warning Against 'Unstable' Increases

A warning that the Government may be forced to control the prices of copper, zinc and lead—all vital to the rearmament program—if present "unstable" increases continue, came last night from Leon Henderson, price stabilization director of the National Defense Commission. He said that a survey showed "no justification for the recent unstable price situation" of the defense metals, adding that he would be "reluctant" to recommend Federal control over prices of these metals, but explained they are "vital" to the preparedness efforts.

HENDERSON

He attributed recent price flurries to "the desire of some consumers to cover all their long-term requirements at current prices." There has been some "overreaching by sellers," he said, adding that "certain firms which already have seven to eight months' supply of metal have been in the markets as well as certain foreign countries."

By next July 1, Canada will have sent more than 2,200 air pilots to aid Great Britain in standing off the bruising German assault, it was reported yesterday by C. D. Howe, Canadian minister of munitions and supply.

Here to consult with the British Purchasing Mission, Howe asserted that the entire air-training program in Canada, ultimately to produce 25,000 pilots a year, was well ahead of schedule in all respects.

The War Department yesterday awarded contracts totaling $128,726,434 for tanks, artillery, trucks and other ordnance equipment. Largest order went to the American Car and Foundry Co. of Berwick, Pa., for $37,687,458 worth of tanks and spare parts. Another order for $34,451,249 for half track cars and scouts cars went to the White Motor Co., of Cleveland, Ohio.

C. U. Educators Tell of Tour In S. America

See Stronger Cultural Ties if More Catholics Visit Southern Nations

Stronger cultural ties between the United States and the South American republics would be formed if more Catholics in this country visited the southern nations, two officials of Catholic University said yesterday.

The officials were Dr. Edwin Ryan, secretary of the Institute of Ibero-American Studies of the university, and Dr. Martin R. P. McGuire, dean of the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences of the university. They returned recently from a six-week tour of Catholic institutions in six South American nations.

Sent by Catholic University, their mission was to bring a closer relationship between their institution and South American Catholic schools. Dr. Ryan said that nearly 20 students are expected to come to the university here from South America in the academic year 1941-1942.

"A common basic tradition makes Catholics in this country better able to build ties with South Americans," said Dr. McGuire. He said that South Americans considered this country a Protestant nation and "learned with amazement that there are as many Catholics in the United States as make up the combined population of Colombia, Venezuela and Ecuador."

When one visits South American nations "the mere fact you're a Catholic transcends all other differences," declared Dr. Ryan.

"The main interest in South American schools is on practical subjects—mining, engineering, law," Dr. McGuire said. "There is as yet little scientific training of an advanced character such as exists in our country."

Since the closing of Europe to students, "South Americans are looking more and more to the United States for training," Dr. McGuire continued. He said that while exchange of students on a graduate basis was desirable between North and South America, the "difference in background" made student exchange on an undergraduate level virtually impossible.

Traveling by plane, the educators visited Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Peru, Ecuador and Colombia. They left this country August 6 and returned September 21.

Law's Delays

Housing Is Outracing Statutes, Says Judge

Holding that "low-cost housing groups are running ahead of the law," Judge Hobart Newman yesterday dismissed from Police Court charges of violation of license regulations brought against Skyland, Inc., a multi-unit apartment house corporation.

Skyland, Inc., a 21-building apartment project on Good Hope road southeast, through Harvey Warwick, president, was charged with "operation an apartment house without first having obtained a license so to do and paying the license tax therefor."

The Government contended that each of the 21 buildings should be licensed at the usual fee of $15 per year instead of being allowed to operate the buildings under a single license. Judge Newman's decision recognized a $15 license fee instead of 21 fees totaling $315.

He declared:

"I realize that my decision in this case may disrupt the licensing practises now in existence in the District, but I feel that in order to uphold the Government's contention I would have to do more interpreting than is legally reasonable.

"In my opinion, the license law applies to the person conducting a business and not, such as in this case, to the number of apartment houses that go to make up a business at any one location."

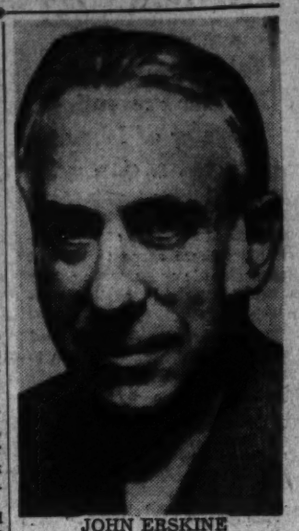
Erskine Urges Study Courses To Keep Draftees Contented

A. E. F. Mentor Fears Time May Hang Too Heavy Over Camps



JOHN ERSKINE

John Erskine, author, educator and chairman of the Army Education Committee in the A. E. F., believes the national defense program should include an educational setup.

If no war should come and the trainees, taken from their civilian jobs, consider that they have undergone a futile experience it would lead to bitterness, he thinks.

On the basis of his experience in the A. E. F. in 1918-19 he thinks such a program would be popular and profitable.

In France, where as many as 900,000 soldiers engaged in the courses, in most instances choosing their own subjects, the program struck a wide stride following the armistice.

He thinks it now might be used as profitably in the spare time of the peacetime trainees. The soldiers, he remembered, elected to take strange combinations of study.

One, for example, elected the combination of medieval history, portrait painting and hog feeding. Dr. Erskine approved, seeing the practical sense in it.

The man, he explained, never had been abroad and recognized his opportunity of studying history on the ground where it occurred; he had imagined he could be an artist with a little formal training. Then, his father was a farmer back in Iowa and he wanted to learn all possible about hogs so he could send his father the latest information.

"They want such training and that is the thing of it," Dr. Erskine said. He is stopping at the Mayflower Hotel.

Liquor Dealer Sues for $50,000

Morris Stirman, liquor dealer, 1758 Hobart street northwest, charged in a suit he filed in the District Court yesterday that he was defamed at an hearing on August 26.

Wallace Calls Latin-America Problem Grave

Widely Cheered When He Switches to Spanish In Albuquerque Talk

By the Associated Press

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Sept. 27. Coming into the Spanish-speaking Southwest, Henry A. Wallace, Democratic Vice Presidential nominee, said today the "Latin-American problem is one of the greatest problems before the United States."

"Make no mistake about it—the dictators have definite designs on this hemisphere," he declared.

Wallace spoke before the New Mexico Democratic State platform convention.

Cheers Switch to Spanish

The crowd—a large portion of it composed of Spanish-Americans—cheered wildly when the nominee suddenly switched from English to Spanish.

Wallace pointed to the "events of the past few days"—referring to the siege of Dakar on the west African coast—to emphasize "that the westernmost tip of Africa is only 1,600 miles from the easternmost tip of Brazil."

"Unity of the Americas," the nominee continued, "is so vitally important that it pains me deeply that certain gentlemen running for office in the United States could, by a careless statement, offend any neighbors to the south.

Refers to Argentine Beef

"So I question, from a national defense standpoint, when a certain gentleman spoke with harshness concerning the purchase by the United States Navy of an amount of beef representing 96 head of cattle."

Wallace's statements on the purchase of Argentine beef for the Navy—fought by Western cattlemen—produced scattered cheers in the audience which included many cattle growers.

The Argentine purchase was criticized recently by Wendell L. Willkie, Republican Presidential nominee, on his Western swing.

Ruby Black Writes Book On First Lady

THE NEWSPAPER GIRLS in Washington are regarding Ruby Black, past president of the Women's National Press Club, with envy and admiration. Beside running her own press bureau department, being a United Press correspondent, managing her home in Alexandria, looking after her husband, Herbert Little, and young daughter, Jane, she has written a biography of Mrs. Roosevelt.

She tossed it off, just like that, between the stunt party of the Women's National Press Club, which closed her year in office, and the Fourth of July. Just two days after the stunt party last March, she put the first words on paper, and the manuscript was expressed to the publisher, Duell, Sloan and Pearce, July 3. She wrote during the day, turning over the work of her own press bureau to her two assistants, and, with but three exceptions, covering only stories of Mrs. Roosevelt for the United Press during that time.

She wired in, after the Chicago convention, the first complete account of why Mrs. Roosevelt attended and her part in it.

The book of 350 pages will be out October 11, on the First Lady's fifty-sixth birthday. October 19 has been set for an autographing party for the author at Woodward & Lothrop's.

It is Miss Black's first book, although she was coeditor of "Washington—Nerve Center," by Edwin Rosskam, published more than a year ago. She interviewed "many Washington officials including the President," she says, in gathering material, but talked comparatively little to Mrs. Roosevelt herself. She has been in constant contact with her, however, covering that assignment for the United Press since 1933. She first met Mrs. Roosevelt when she went to New York to get acquainted with her February 14 of that year, later coming to Washington for the inauguration, going with her party to Puerto Rico, and following all of her activities subsequently—a period not covered in Mrs. Roosevelt's autobiography "This Is My Story."

Miss Black's hardest job, she said, was to choose from the vast amount of material she had that which would give the truest picture of the First Lady. The book contains much that has never before been written of her.

SABBATH ALLIANCE — Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, yesterday was guest speaker at a meeting of the Sabbath Alliance, held at the home of Mrs. Wintemute W. Sloan, at Woodley Towers. Mrs. Ellis Logan, the president, presided at the meeting and Mrs. Henry John Smith led the devotional service.

The program also included original poems by Mrs. Evelyn Norcross Sherrell, Mrs. Charles Osgood, Mrs. Jesse Stup and Mrs. Harry Gutridge.

For Lewis, who was awarded the Nobel Prize in Literature in 1930, it will be his first time in the teaching profession.

Her Marriage 'All Wrong,' Hedy Lamarr Wins Divorce

Tells Court Markey Made Her Feel Like Stranger in Own Home

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Sept. 27.—Glamorous Hedy Lamarr was granted a divorce today from Gene Markey, screen writer, on cruelty charges after she testified he made her feel like a stranger in her own home, wrote her notes to avoid talking with her and told her their marriage 18 months ago was "all wrong."

The dark-haired 25-year-old Viennese actress, who once was the wife of Fritz Mandl, wealthy Austrian munitions maker, said she spent only four "nice, quiet evenings at home alone" since she was married in Ensenada, Mexico, March 4, 1939.

Markey is 44 and the former husband of Joan Bennett, actress.

"How long had you known Mr. Markey before the marriage?" inquired Superior Judge William S. Baird.

"Much too short a time," the actress replied. "Four weeks."

"I think that is the answer," the court commented.

Miss Lamarr, whose theatrical career began as a script girl at the age of 16 and included her daring swimming performance in the nude in a flower-fringed pool in the European film "Ecstasy," made her court appearance in informal dress. She wore a raspberry-colored polo coat over a pink and white print dress and no hat.

A property settlement awarded her their suburban home and its furnishings.

The actress testified that although she enjoyed staying at home evenings alone with Markey he "tried to avoid talking to me about anything private and therefore we had people at home or went out—anything to avoid talking."

On the evening they separated Hedy said Markey proposed that they "play a game in which he said, 'You write down what is wrong with me and vice versa.' I said: 'I don't think you need to play games now. We might as well talk frankly, because it is enough now—this game business won't do.'

"So we told each other, and it ended up in a rather unpleasant thing, and he left the house."

Hitler's Envoy Seeks Russia, Japan Accord

Stalin's Terms Called Harsh, Would Upset Concessions to Tokyo

By Hallett Abend

Copyright by New York Times

Shanghai, Sept. 27.—Radical anti-American and anti-British elements, among the Japanese, particularly those in the Japanese army were jubilant over the conclusion of the new Axis alliance and are already renewing pressure for the taking over of Shanghai's two foreign areas regardless of consequences.

The immediate future of the international situation in the Far East now depends to a great extent on what degree of an understanding the Germans were able to arrange between Japan and Russia. It is understood that Hitler's representative in Tokyo, Max Stahmer, having concluded the tri-partite arriance satisfactorily, is now acting as go-between for Moscow and Tokyo.

Stalin's terms, as reported here, however, are extremely harsh from a Japanese point of view. He is said to demand: firstly, the abrogation of the Portsmouth, N. H., treaty except that portion ceding the southern half of Saghalien Island to Japan. This would disturb Japan's immensely valuable fishing concessions off the Siberian coast, which not only furnishes an important portion of the empire's food supply but also considerable of its cash profits.

Stalin, it is reported, is also demanding the cancellation of all oil, coal and other concessions to Japan, in the northern half of Saghalien, coupled with a complete demilitarization of Japan's southern half. Even more vital to Japan's position in Manchoukuo and Korea, Stalin is said to be insisting on the demolition of all fortifications along the Korean and Manchoukuoan frontiers adjoining Siberia and Outer Mongolia, coupled with a formal renunciation on Japan's part of any aspirations, territorial or otherwise, concerning Outer Mongolia.

Japan Feared Ready For Dutch Indies Drive

Shanghai (Saturday), Sept. 28 (U.P.).—Japan may launch an immediate drive and possibly an armed invasion of the Dutch East Indies to obtain vital war materials as the result of her new military alliance with Germany and Italy, authoritative quarters predicted today.

With the great source of her scrap-iron supplies cut off by the United States embargo, it was said, Japan must look to the East Indies for a great part of her war materials needed to fulfill the clauses of the new triple alliance.

Japanese Spread Into Indo-China

Hanoi, Indo-China, Sept. 27 (U.P.).—The advance of Japanese forces into this French colony continued today despite reported orders from Tokyo, and local authorities asked the Japanese government to send a plenipotentiary to halt the movement.

Japanese troops who landed yesterday at Haiphong, port of Hanoi, today occupied the Doson shore batteries protecting the port after detaining two French officers and disarming their native soldiers.

Japanese forces of the Canton army were reported in the vicinity of Dongmo, an important communications center between Hanoi and Langson.

The advance to Dongmo was said to have been made after the Japanese had encircled and disarmed a large part of the French colonial forces.

Authorities here said that Gen. Mishihara, who negotiated the Japanese-French agreement here last Sunday, had failed to halt the Canton army and now was en route to Tokyo by sea. It was not indicated whether he would return here.

Government officials were remaining in Hanoi for the time being, but it was believed they would evacuate the capital unless the Japanese advance on this city was halted.

Party System Permanent, Says President

Franklin, Jr., Reads Message at Meeting Of Young Democrats

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Sept. 27.—Through his son, President Roosevelt told the national preelection rally of the Young Democratic Clubs of America tonight that there always will be two parties in the United States and "inevitably the struggle must be between the forces of liberalism and the forces of reaction."

Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., read the President's message at a public meeting of delegates representing Young Democratic clubs from all parts of the country.

"In sending my hearty greetings to the national rally of the Young Democratic Clubs of America at Miami," the President wrote, "I desire to emphasize a hard and unchanging truth which is that the Democratic Party has succeeded whenever it has had the courage to be democratic. It has failed whenever its leaders have sought to diverge from a democratic course.

"There are two parties in this country. There always will be two parties in this country. Their names may change but the issues between them are definite. Inevitably the struggle must be between the forces of liberalism and the forces of reaction. That struggle will go on as long as selfishness finds a place in the heart of man.

"The world cannot stand still—the watchword of youth must ever be progress. Politics, which in the correct sense is another name for government, can no more be conducted on the lines of half a century ago than business could be expected to function along with quill pens instead of typewriters and written messages instead of telephones. So my message to you is simply that if you will do your best for your party and your country you must adhere to the true principles of a liberal democracy."

Spanish Press Sees U.S. Forced to Back Down or Enter War

Madrid, Sept. 27 (AP).—The Spanish press jubilantly hailed the new Rome-Berlin-Tokyo axis tonight as placing the United States in a ticklish position and as "wresting the liberty of movement from the Yankee Government."

"The United States faces a dilemma," one influential newspaper said. "She must give up her plans and void English hopes or intervene immediately in the war without waiting for completion of her grand rearmament program."

"Don't forget the Philippines," commented the highly placed newspaper Informaciones. "A new order will be imposed there by Japan. Yankee domination has been unable to root out of that Malayan archipelago what our forefathers sowed to last forever."

Although Spain failed to play the star role in today's Berlin drama, as had been predicted, it appeared nevertheless that she was drawing closer to the Axis and might soon make an open declaration of her position.

Must Be Exposed

Indications that pressure has been used to hamper and delay the Senatorial investigation in Jersey City seem fully to justify the storm which Senator Tobey aroused in the Senate on Thursday. The Committee on Campaign Expenditures should not be allowed to forget that the public expects a full exposure of this alleged padding of the voting lists before election day.

Senator Gillette is right, of course, in insisting that so important an investigation be conducted by a bipartisan committee. A Republican Senator sitting alone in Mayor Hague's stronghold could not do justice to the task of uprooting corruption. Findings there should be checked and reported by representatives of both major parties so that they cannot be laughed off as a partisan smear.

This means, however, that some Democratic member of the investigating committee must assume joint responsibility for exposing the Jersey City voting list to public view. Should the committee be unable to find a member willing to withstand the pressure which the Hague machine can bring to bear upon its opponents, it would stand disgraced before the whole country.

President Roosevelt made a pretty speech the other day about free elections. Senator Tobey comes back with the charge that Jersey City's lists of voters are so heavily padded with the names of persons who have died or moved away that the election there cannot possibly be free. That is a grave accusation. It is a challenge that must be met before election day. Senator Gillette would have won a great deal more respect for his committee if he had made the necessary arrangements for the investigation to go forward immediately without waiting until October 15.

Stamp Plan For D. C.

Last spring efforts to introduce the Federal food-stamp plan in Washington were thwarted for lack of funds with which to make initial purchases of stamps for distribution to relief clients. With characteristic indifference to the needs and desires of the local community, a conference committee eliminated a small appropriation for the purpose from the District budget bill, although it had been requested by Welfare Director Bondy and the Commissioners.

Since Congress consistently refuses to vote an adequate local relief budget, the stamp plan would afford a much needed addition to the limited District resources available for such purposes. Over 160 cities are already receiving the benefits of the plan and about 1,000 others have applied for participation. Here is striking testimony as to its growing popularity.

The stamp plan is open to criticism on grounds of policy since it is a form of direct Federal aid that tends to weaken the sense of local responsibility for care of the destitute. The fact that a city such as Washington, with untapped resources from which it could finance all legitimate relief needs, turns to this kind of Federal aid provides an illustration of its weakness in principle.

Apart from these objections, however, the plan appears to meet with general approbation in cities where it is now operating. Local business groups, as well as welfare agencies, commend it, because it enables surplus foods to be disposed of through regular distributive channels, and increases the amount of buying by relief clients.

By requiring each recipient of free blue stamps to buy twice as many orange stamps to be used in paying for other than surplus commodities, the plan assures a more balanced diet for participants and prevents relief clients from relying too heavily upon consumption of surplus foods. The result is better business for local food stores and more and better food for the needy.

It is estimated that 19,000 persons in the District would be eligible for benefits under the stamp plan. Without such aid, many of these needy residents are sadly undernourished. Since the Department of Agriculture is said to favor introduction of the plan here, all that is needed is a small revolving fund. Possibly $75,000 would be sufficient.

After investigating the operation of the system in Baltimore, local officials are reported to have been so favorably impressed that they contemplate renewing their earlier recommendation for its immediate introduction here. Under existing conditions, the sooner the plan is launched the better it will be from the viewpoint of needy residents of the District.

The Totalitarian Pact

Many Americans may have been shocked yesterday by the announcement of the three-power military alliance between Germany, Italy and Japan. But that is not true of official Washington. As Secretary Hull hastened to point out, the Department of State has long been aware of the negotiations and the understandings which led to the current formal agreement.

No one who has followed events in Europe and Asia in recent years will be surprised by the announcement from Berlin. Germany, Italy and Japan have been united by their so-called anti-comintern pact since 1937. Some observers have always believed that agreement to be a sort of military alliance. In recent years, moreover, there have been frequent reports that the aggressors in Europe and Asia were binding their ties a little closer.

The common policies pursued have also long suggested a close understanding among the trio. It may be that an alliance has been in existence for some time, and that the partners are now making it public for purposes of their own. In any event, it does not substantially change the grave international problems that confront the United States.

Congress approved the building of a two-ocean Navy largely because of the very real danger that this country may have to defend itself in the Pacific and the Atlantic at the same time. The community of interest between the Axis in Europe and Japan in Asia has been so obvious that prudent statesmen in both Great Britain and this country had to assume the existence of the alliance which has now been formalized.

This alliance is pointedly directed at the United States. The partners in aggression pledge themselves "to assist one another with all political, economic and military means when one of the three contracting powers is attacked by a power at present not involved in the European war or in the Chinese-Japanese conflict." No doubt the pact was announced at this time chiefly as an effort to intimidate this country.

For that very reason it may have a salutary effect. It puts into cold print for every American to see the fact that the dominant power in Asia and the new masters of the European continent are joined in a pact aimed at the United States. The unmistakable purpose of that treaty is to establish "new orders" in Europe and Asia to be dominated by the dictators. And the implication is clear that any nation standing in the way of this totalitarian pursuit of mastery is to be crushed.

This is certainly not a pleasant outlook. But the sooner the American people adjust their thinking to the ugly realities of our international situation the better will be our chances of averting disaster.

So far as the war in Europe is concerned, the pact has a hopeful implication. Not long ago the Germans were talking as if the war were over. It was then said that Germany would not permit Japan to step in and claim the Far Eastern spoils of the conflict in Europe. Hitler would take for himself the rich Asiatic territories of conquered European countries. Now he publicly recognizes Japan's leadership in creating a "new order" in the Far East in return for a pledge of cooperation from Japan.

That fact suggests an actual belief in Berlin that the war is far from being over. The Axis powers have found it desirable publicly to recognize Japan as a partner. More than ever it appears that Berlin is preparing for a longer war than its propaganda agents have been forecasting.

Bungling Procedure

If Congress had acted upon the five-year plan for amortizing new defense plant facilities for tax purposes before considering the intricacies of excess-profit taxation industrial preparedness would undoubtedly be progressing more rapidly at present.

Critics of the bungling legislative procedure followed at Administration urging pointed out weeks ago that a great deal of time would be required to draft and pass an acceptable excess-profits tax measure. It was obvious that industrialists would hesitate to invest capital in new defense plants until they could be assured of adequate depreciation allowances for tax purposes on such emergency outlays. Events have amply justified the critics' warnings.

The weakest feature of the defense program is the fact that it has to be carried forward under pressure of a growing world chaos that menaces this Nation. We are long on material resources but short on time to build weapons. Yet, instead of conserving time by promptly removing the uncertainties hampering industrial cooperation with the Government, Congress has held up the building of defense plants while it toiled through an extremely intricate tax bill.

Fortunately, the House and Senate conferees have at last responded to appeals of the National Defense Commission by reaching an agreement upon the amortization section of the bill. An objectionable feature of the House bill, which had the Treasury's approval, would have given the Government indefinite control over disposition of new defense facilities financed with private capital. That proviso has been eliminated in favor of the more liberal provisions of the Senate bill. On the other hand, as a concession to the House, the amortization plan is to apply only to construction started after June 10 instead of last January.

Although this compromise plan has yet to run the gantlet of a final vote by both houses, Senator Harrison has appealed to the press to tell the country that final approval is certain. His plea provides further evidence that Congress has handled the tax program in a very maladroit manner.

Important differences between the House and Senate on taxing excess profits have still to be settled. But industry now has sufficient assurances of fair treatment to justify it in going ahead with the expansion of plants for defense production without further dangerous and disturbing delays.

One More Chance

There is still opportunity to repair the damage done to the Ramspeck bill by the Senate amendment excluding from the civil service deputy collectors of internal revenue, deputy marshals, and assistant United States attorneys. The bill is now on its way to conference where it is possible that the offending amendment will be eliminated.

In spite of the breach made in the bill by the spoilsmen, it will mark another long step forward for advocates of the merit system. The covering into the civil service of many thousands of Government employes owing their jobs to the patronage system would be a noteworthy achievement at any time. The fact that it is to be authorized in an election year and at a time of national emergency is especially impressive.

With the Hatch Acts on the statute books, the political value of the patronage system of appointment will gradually disappear. As that fact is borne in upon Congressional spoilsmen, their opposition to civil service reform should lose its old purposive force.

While it is deplorable that the Senate should cling to the remnants of a discredited spoils system that is wasteful and administratively inefficient, its reactionary vote for the Ellender amendment is only a temporary setback for the reform movement. Judging by the progress recently made in strengthening and extending the civil service, it can hardly be doubted that ultimately a sweeping victory is assured. The privilege of hastening that triumph of good government now rests with the conference committee.

Literary Politics

Since both the Republican and Democratic campaign strategists have taken to lining up the Nation's most popular writers, playwrights and actors behind their respective candidates, we anticipate no end of confusion in the November election. There is no telling how many book-loving voters will pass judgment upon Franklin D. Roosevelt and Wendell L. Willkie because of the literary company they keep.

And now Mrs. Roosevelt has undertaken to organize a radio show of famous names in support of her husband and the third term. The only thing lacking to upset the average voter's political equilibrium is for one or both of the parties to make a raid on Hollywood and take over the movies.

Disruption of families over politics as the son bolts the party of his father and grandfather is traditional. But, when the division follows the line of "he is my favorite author" or "she is my favorite actress," the quarrel may well approach a civil war. One can be mistaken about candidates but not about writers or actresses.

By way of fanciful evesdropping, we listen-in on a meeting of one of any number of Friday afternoon literary and knitting circles whose members are upset by this strange union of politics and belles-lettres:

Mrs. Jones: I just don't know which way to vote now. Booth Tarkington is such a fine writer that I feel I owe it to him to vote for Mr. Willkie. But Edna Ferber has done so much to make women novelists respected by the critics that I think we should stand behind her and support Mr. Roosevelt. What do you think, Mrs. Smith.

Mrs. Smith: Well, personally, I have never gotten over "Anthony Adverse." Hervey Allen has so much romance in his soul that I think I'll vote for Mr. Roosevelt.

Mrs. Brown: And then there's Marc Connelly's "Green Pastures." What has Mr. Willkie done to compare with that?

Mrs. Jones: But my daughter will never forgive me if I don't vote for Mr. Willkie. She's just crazy about Bob Montgomery.

Perhaps, Messrs. George S. Kaufman and Morrie Ryskind were prophetic when they wrote "Of Thee I Sing."

The years make pessimists of us all.

Another highly incompatible mixture is hay fever and romance.

A person who fails can usually make a come-back if his frozen assets do not include the one north of his ears.

Our Last Ballot?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Our President has established many precedents since he was elected to the Presidency in 1932. The first was his almost utter disregard for the platform on which he was elected and to which he subscribed.

He next tried to control industry of the entire Nation through the NRA, which the United States Supreme Court declared was unconstitutional. He then tried to control the court itself by packing it.

When opposed in his plans, he unsuccessfully sought to punish certain conscientious Senators by attempted purges. He asked a rubber-stamp Congress for billions to spend as he thought best—and got the money. He gave 50 destroyers to England in exchange for naval and airplane bases, without consulting Congress—and got away with it!

And now, in the most far-reaching precedent of all, he is asking for a third term to control the country in the most critical stage of its history since the Revolution.

Will the President be successful in this last bold adventure? If he is, the favored voters may have the honor of casting their last ballot for a President of the United States. CAPT. CHAS. H. COE.

Washington, Sept. 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Here in this Nation, whose belief in the common people to produce men capable of governing wisely is expressed in that homespun phrase, "From log cabin to the White House," a question frequently discussed is just when did Franklin Roosevelt become inflated with that egotistic idea that he alone, among over 130,000,000 people, is qualified to be President of the United States?

Was he, perhaps, toying with that idea when, in the first month of his first Administration, he made that vague prophecy that he might be the last President of the United States?

For nearly eight years our country has been thrown into near-chaos by this man who cannot rest unless something is happening, and who sincerely believes that nothing will happen unless he sets things in motion. Nobody questions the sincerity of Roosevelt in regard to that quaint idea.

ELIZABETH EMMETT.

A World Of Freedom

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At the dinner in honor of Charles Edward Russell's eightieth birthday at which representatives of many oppressed peoples spoke, and at which Eugene Meyer graphically portrayed the many-sided career of this great champion of freedom for all peoples, we were made to realize more clearly that freedom can never be attained until all peoples of every race and creed are free.

With all Europe except England dominated by the Axis Powers, the overthrow of Hitler would make possible the establishment of the United States of Europe as a democracy without any superior race, but where all men would be free and all would have equal opportunity and equal protection.

But this Europe must realize that the peoples of Asia, Africa and the isles of the sea must also have freedom and the opportunity to develop and share in the resources of their lands and the fruits of their labor.

Until the Hindoo, Chinese, natives of Africa, and such people everywhere are free to develop and share in their own governments, we cannot have peace anywhere. The keynote of the old order that is fast passing out has been the exploitation of all people not strong enough to defend themselves. It has failed because it is wicked and its success has sowed the seeds of its own destruction.

The new order that will rise on the ashes of the old will have for its keynote altruism and brotherly love, which alone will bring peace.

HOWARD D. WOODSON.

Washington, Sept. 26.

The War Of Nerves

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a military sense this has been the most humane of all wars. The campaigns have been short and decisive. As a result, leadership and ideas have changed with less loss of life and less physical suffering than ever before in history.

As a war of nerves, however, it has been terrific. Every conceivable means have been utilized, including lies, propaganda and war machines of little military effectiveness, to whip up fear, hate and hysteria. The emotional strain is kept continuously at the breaking point, merely to change the minds of men.

In a military sense, the war seems to have about run its course. The German might can't swim over to England and the British seapower can't crawl into Germany. The war of nerves, however, goes on, stimulated by desultory airplane bombings, various sideshows in the Near East, and by the slow, clumsy convulsions of ancient Asia.

This winter may finish off both Churchill and Hitler and the ideas they stand for and plunge Europe back into the anarchy of the Dark Ages, or both may hold on and fight until ultimate victory has been achieved by death, starvation and exhaustion.

In a military sense, America has absolutely nothing to fear from either Europe or Asia for the next 1,000 years. But the war of nerves goes on. The entire world may point the finger at our hoard of gold as the real cause of the collapse of civilization. The minds of men must change here too. Those who have economic acquisitions or political positions must somehow give up the idea that they have been chosen to dominate and frustrate those who aspire only to serve humanity. GEO. W. CHRISTIANS.

Northwestern Votes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the good account of Mr. Willkie's tour of the Northwest, in The Post of September 25, I find this brief paragraph:

"Almost a third of the voters in North Dakota are of German stock. A Fargo editor expressed the opinion that a large proportion of them will vote against Mr. Roosevelt."

To me this is significant. It is known, too, that a goodly proportion of the voters in Minnesota, South Dakota and Wisconsin are of German stock. Is it because of this that these States are so confidently claimed for Mr. Willkie?

To me it is also significant that in his tour of the Northwest Mr. Willkie has had little to say about Germany's atrocities under Hitler.

"Crystal Heights"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At long last, after imitating the good, bad and indifferent of Europe, our Nation's Capital is to come of age architecturally and make her own contribution to the ageless world of art.

Now, instead of pseudo-this or pseudo-that, we are to have that for which our hearts have yearned—an honest-to-goodness expression of America and the things for which she stands. We are to have in Washington, in the form of Crystal Heights, designed by that greatest of living architects, Frank Lloyd Wright, an architectural creation as truly American as was Walt Whitman himself.

More and more, America is realizing her manifest destiny.

Tribute To A Washingtonian

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Albert LeSuer Baldwin, 70, Washington insurance man, died yesterday . . ."

So began an obituary in The Post of September 21. You read on, if you knew him, noting mechanically that he was born in Kinsman, Ohio; that he came to Washington in 1890 with the Coast and Geodetic Survey; that he co-authored "Earth Movements in California;" spent 20 years as general agent for Northwestern Life; is survived by his wife, five children, 11 grandchildren . . . How little do facts tell the story? The shadow of a living man, a silhouette correct in funereal black.

No vital statistics, no chronicle could ever give the impact, the worth of A. L. It could never let you see him, for instance, as he looked a few days before—tall, spindly, pale, his eyes incongruously bright and young. It could give you no clew to the activity of his busy mind, nor suggest the way his thoughtful pout would broaden into a grin as his sense of humor relieved his concern over a problem. As he shuffled along hastily upon some errand, you would hardly guess that he had just begun to live.

Encomiums and eulogies will doubtless come from the insurance profession; but he rated as his best years the ones bordering his retirement. He had then made the discovery predicted by Steinmetz, who said that man's newest frontier would be in the spiritual realm.

In his last year, A. L. found an active faith in God that plugged him into a power line. The goodness that had previously been his, became suddenly fruitful and expansive. He learned, first with a boy's humility, then with a boy's enthusiasm, the art of listening to God and carrying out His purposes.

What has perplexed the sages was simple to him. It was simple to you as he told it, his eyes shining. He told it to many, because the time was short. And because his faith was genuine, and his affection genuine, many caught his secret from him. There is a carpenter in Maine, once embittered, who is carrying on in the spirit of A. L.; an elderly couple up in New York State, happily remarried after 17 years of estrangement; a retired medical officer who learned from him a new technique and treatment of men; these are only a few of a long list.

Maybe he laid him down with a will, but he'd never let you know it. He was still planning new work, looking for new men to help. Few have made the winter seem more beautiful, more creative; few have so well lived Browning's invitation to "Grow old along with me!

The best is yet to be,
The last of life, for which the first was made.
Our times are in His hand
Who saith, 'A whole I planned:
Youth shows but half; trust God;
see all, nor be afraid.'"

Gentleman's Estate

THE SIGN, "For Sale, Gentleman's Country Estate," which was taken down during Bill's occupancy of the old house, is now back again—and so is Bill. I mean that Bill is back in a Washington apartment which is both swanky and expensive. Perhaps it is a "Gentleman's apartment." I should be the last one to decide that point.

Bill is still puzzled at his experience with "gentlemen's estates." He can tell the facts, but he can neither understand nor explain them. He has always liked country houses with quaint names, such as "Queen's Folly," and he has always thought that a fox-hunting, country gentleman has a good life.

One day he was driving along a country road near Washington when he saw this place which he suddenly wanted. To cut short the details, Bill leased the estate. He thinks that the agent did not inquire whether or not he was a "gentleman." Maybe the agent was as much confused as Bill upon this subject. Bill thinks that the first World War changed many concepts of society. He says that by the time this war is over it will take a lawyer to define the term "gentleman," provided there are any people left to be classified.

Though the place was called a "gentleman's" property, there was something feminine about its rooms, the odd shapes of which fitted into each other like bright bits in a stained-glass window. Bill could never remember the floor-plan once he was away from the house. If it was a gentleman who planned the design, he must have been an old beaux with the complex mind of a spiteful woman.

BILL FELT awkward in the house. His slacks and shirts, his haberdashery, his racy speech, all failed to conform to some intangible demand. The house hated his taste in books. "Grapes of Wrath" is an example of what I mean. He couldn't keep a copy intact in the house, nor a copy of "Gone With the Wind." They fell off the shelves and dropped out of the bindings. But as long as he kept a copy of "Horace" in his pocket, he was safe. As for the smart, new magazines, Bill had to keep these in an outhouse in the garden.

When the house found that Bill had a tough streak, it began to get vicious. Stairs broke under his feet; tiles fell off the roof; dangerous holes appeared where he was about to step.

Here I interrupted to ask Bill if he meant to be taken seriously. I said, "You must know that all old houses do these things."

He said that all houses are not like this one. He has lived in old places before, but they belonged to plain people. He doesn't know about the houses of the aristocracy. This was his first experience. Bill said that he had been rejected by "cuties" in his time, upon many and odd grounds, but he had never been thrown out as coldly as by the old country house.

He was willing to humor the place. He thought that getting a "gentleman's gentleman" might help. He had always laid out his own clothes, and it worried him to have a gloomy retainer hanging around in what should be sacredly private moments like the bath or brushing of teeth. But this house demanded servants. So Bill hired a "gentleman's gentleman" on the Wodehouse model. But Bill was afraid something was wrong with him, because the house included him in its comprehensive hates. Finally he disappeared without leaving a trace, and Bill is afraid to investigate. The house seems to have swallowed him completely.

BILL HAS NO heirlooms. Perhaps he could have impressed the house if he could have produced family portraits. He bought a doubtful Stuart picture of an old girl in pink brocade and a colossal wig. It must have been spurious because it fell during the first night in an awful storm when the house almost buckled its beams in rage at the intrusion.

Bill is genuinely attached to his saxophone. The first night when he began to play Cole Porter numbers on the instrument, the lightning hit a chimney. The second time, a crack appeared in the south wall. Bill ordered a spinet next day, but Bill is not the spinet type. So he fell back on his radio, but when "Boogie-Woogie" poured out of the speaker, a crystal chandelier overhead crashed in a billion slivers.

Steak and onions, served on the ancient mahogany board, now hit Bill a blow below the belt. Before this, his digestion had been perfect. He tried to persuade the cook to prepare the old dishes, but she left and Bill ate at "Ye Tavèrne," where he could enjoy a hamburger without a guilty conscience.

Bill feels that is is sad to be faced with the suspicion that one is not a gentleman, even in the opinion of a shabby old house, especially when one is too old to learn new ways. Bill says he wishes he had bought the house before he was too old to profit by its training.

He says that the worst of all is that he cannot formulate to himself in just what way he fails to meet the concepts of the house. If he were to wear his clothes like Anthony Eden or display the manner of the ancient regime, he thinks he still would lack something subtle which the house would detect.

Bill says that a mousey little man is now leasing the place.

"Is he a gentleman?" I asked.

"I don't know," Bill admitted, wiping a tear from the good eye (the one spared by the falling chandelier). "He is the descendant of half-a-dozen Colonial Governors. Whether or not he can please that confounded ladylike house is another question." E. DALWICK.

Japan and the Axis

THE STATEMENT from Tokyo that Japan will go to the help of Germany if the United States goes to the help of Great Britain is propaganda calculated to confuse American opinion. The exact opposite is the truth of the matter: in so far as the United States has not supplied the means to insure a victorious British resistance in Europe, Japan has expanded her aggression in the Far East; in so far as Britain is weakened in the Atlantic, Japan will work ever more actively hand in hand with the Axis. The victory of Britain will stop Japan. The defeat of Britain would make the partnership between Japan and the Axis a two-ocean alliance encircling this hemisphere.

No credence whatever can be placed in the Japanese suggestion that the United States can prevent the formation of this two-ocean alliance by abandoning Great Britain. On the contrary, the abandonment of Great Britain would have as its inevitable consequence the development of this two-ocean alliance. The United States would then be completely isolated and would have only a one-ocean navy to defend it.

THE TWO-OCEAN alliance between Japan and the Axis has been in the making since 1936. The foundations were laid in the anti-Comintern Pact between Germany and Japan. This fact was a very ingenious diplomatic device which served many purposes. Its first purpose was to immobilize Russia by the threat of war on two fronts—in the west from Germany and in the east from Japan. Its second purpose was to set a booby trap for public opinion in all the democratic countries by presenting Nazi Germany as the champion of western civilization against bolshevism: actually, as events have amply demonstrated, the object of the pact was to immobilize Russia, to confuse the democracies and to lay the strategic foundation for a world-wide attack on the British, French and American control of the seas.

The Spanish civil war disclosed the real strategic purpose of the so-called anti-Comintern Pact. For instead of conducting "a crusade" against Soviet Russia, the anti-Comintern partners in Europe left Russia alone and established themselves in Spain, behind the French, behind the British at Gibraltar and athwart the vital communications of the Western Mediterranean. While they continued to make faces at Russia, Japan and the Axis did all their fighting and their conquering elsewhere. The Germans and Italians and the Japanese moved in wherever they could at points which threatened not Russia, but Great Britain and France. Finally, when the showdown came in the summer of 1939, Germany made a treaty with Soviet Russia for the partition of Poland and the restoration of the lost Russian provinces in order to be free to consummate the great design of smashing the Anglo-French position in the world.

IN THE EARLY DAYS of the Nazi-Soviet Pact the Japanese were angered and shocked. But because they were deeply involved in the Chinese war, it soon developed that Japan and Germany had a supreme common interest in the destruction of the Anglo-French power. Japan could be undisputed master of the Far East only if the Allies were defeated. For then, and only then, could the United States be compelled to withdraw its fleet from the Pacific in order to protect the Atlantic, thus abandoning the Western Pacific to Japan. And on the other hand, if the United States could be entangled in the Far East, the task of Germany would be easier in Europe because the United States would then be unable to give substantial assistance to Great Britain.

During the war, therefore, the joint policy of Germany and Japan has been to keep the United States from taking any active measures to insure its position in either ocean. The Japanese moved slowly but kept threatening us just enough to make us aware of the danger of war in the Pacific; the Axis conducted the phoney war in Europe long enough to disintegrate the French and the smaller neutrals and to keep Americans from realizing what was being prepared. So well did they succeed in chloroforming American opinion that even after the mine was exploded and France destroyed, neither political convention dared to recognize publicly what was happening, and even today, though both candidates do recognize it, the politicians and many journalists are for the most part talking as if they were fighting the election of 1936 for a second time.

ACTUALLY, what has happened is that the collapse of France has weakened the British position so greatly that it has now become feasible for the Axis and Japan to work actively together and to strike simultaneously. The collapse of France gave Germany bases from which to bombard the British Isles and to prepare the threat of an invasion. It opened the road through Spain to Gibraltar and from there to Northern Africa and to bases that threaten the sea lanes to South America. It released the Italians in North Africa for an attack on Suez via Egypt and perhaps via Syria and Palestine as well. The defeat of the French army put Russia more than ever at the mercy of Germany, and it is not at all inconceivable that Russia will be bullied and bribed into conducting a campaign against Turkey and against the oil fields of the Middle East. And at the same time, the defeat of France and the installation of the Vichy government opened Indo-China to a Japanese campaign designed to strangle China and to threaten the great British naval base at Singapore.

No matter what agreements are published, the circumstances are such that the working partnership between the Axis and Japan is now more than ever bound to be active. The two-ocean alliance is a fact. How great a fact it is to become depends now upon the outcome of the German campaign against the British Isles, the Axis campaign in the Middle East, and the Japanese campaign against China and in the Southwestern Pacific. If all these campaigns succeed, that is to say if Britain falls, if the Middle East falls, if Singapore falls, then Germany, Italy and Japan, with France, Russia, Spain, the Balkans as their vassals, will hold the gateways of the two oceans and will possess naval superiority as against any fleet we possess or can build.

BUT ALL THESE campaigns will not succeed as long as the British Isles stand firm as the main base of the British navy. For then, but only then, China can be helped and the Pacific defended from Hawaii to Singapore. In that event the two-ocean alliance will not be effective because Japan and the Axis will remain separated from one another, each confined by superior naval power.

It follows that in resisting the Japanese advance in the Far East, as we are now preparing to do, we must not diminish but on the contrary we must increase our support of Great Britain in the Atlantic. Both positions are extremely important but the absolutely vital position is the British Isles. If that were lost, the Far East would surely be lost too; if that is held victoriously, the Far Eastern position can be held too, and at no desperate cost. The Japanese realize this. For when they tell us that they will help Germany if we help Britain, they are acknowledging that if we do not help Britain, allowing Britain to fall, there will be no British fleet at Singapore, the American fleet will have to leave the Pacific, and, thereafter, Japan will be free to do whatever she likes.

Men Of Genius

THE AUTHOR OF "I Remember: The Autobiography of Abraham Flexner" (Simon & Schuster, $3.75) was born in Louisville, in 1866, the son of immigrant Jewish parents; his older brother's first savings as a druggist sent him, in 1884, to the Johns Hopkins University, in Baltimore, where he completed the four years' course in two years.

Flexner became assistant principal of a Louisville high school before he was 20. For almost two decades he ran his own school, and President Eliot of Harvard was so impressed by the work of Flexner's students that he wrote to Louisville to inquire into Flexner's methods. Soon Flexner was investigating other teachers' methods; eventually, with the aid of Carnegie and Rockefeller millions, he was largely responsible for a revolution in the teaching of medicine in America. His candid studies of prostitution in prewar days prepared the way for another kind of revolution in American thinking. When he thought he was about to retire, another millionaire offered him $5,000,000 or so to found the Institute for Advanced Studies at Princeton.

THE AUTHOR OF "Hugh Young: A Surgeon's Autobiography" (Harcourt, Brace, $5) was born in San Antonio, Tex., four years after Flexner; he was the son of the Confederate Army's youngest general and the grandson of an Indian-fighting frontiersman who at one time held 60 slaves; in four years at the University of Virginia he took three degrees, A. B., A. M. and M. D.; then rounding out his study with a year at Hopkins, he became a specialist in genito-urinary surgery, perfecting new techniques, and, with the aid of "Diamond Jim" Brady's money, founding the finest hospital for his specialty in the country. He was largely responsible for the system of prophylaxis which cut the incidence of venereal disease in the A. E. F. to a startlingly low figure; and he is today a proud grandfather, first citizen of Baltimore, a brilliant surgeon and an extraordinary raconteur.

The parallels in the lives of these two brilliant Southerners are as amazing as is the total difference in the temper of their autobiographies. Dr. Flexner—not to be confused with his younger brother, Simon, for 30 years head of the laboratories of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research—is the thinker and philosopher. Dr. Young is the man of action, born mechanic, born inventor, born apparently with a genius for surgery and for joy in living. Mr. Flexner avows that he was more than 40 years of age when he first became aware of the social and educational problem of the Negroes who played about him in his childhood. Dr. Young is not aware of them yet, and writes with bombastic ignorance of the role of Negro troops in the World War. He writes with equal gusto of whatever he touches, whether it be his incursions into the fields of architecture, where he is a glorious amateur, or his pioneering advances in the field where he is recognized as the glorious master.

Dr. Young's field is one which does not lend itself to summary in a family newspaper; and his chapters recounting his medical experiences, those intended for laymen, are written with a frankness which may shock those not used to the scientific approach, and sometimes with a Rebelaisian delight in the ironies of practice in his specialty. He goes into great detail in reporting his innovations in handling prostate operations and his experience in introducing prophylactic treatment in the American Army in France.

He writes, always, as a man aware that he has lived in a great age of medicine. When he went to the Hopkins, rubber gloves for surgeons were a radical innovation; a little "healthy" pus was a normal aftermath of any successful operation. He had much to do with the introduction of new methods of chemotherapy; he was largely responsible for the development of mercurochrome. He had grown up as a backyard tinker; it has always been his delight to invent new patterns of surgical instruments, and he tells of his inventions with a schoolboy's joy.

His practice brought him in contact with prominent men of many sorts. He operated on Ambassador Francis when he came out of Russia in 1918, and tells a gay story of the American Ambassador hiding his rubbers beneath the royal carpet in Buckingham Palace and being regarded with suspicion when he went back to search for them. He was consultant in President Wilson's last illness. It was his success with "Diamond Jim" Brady that led Brady to build a hospital for him. In fact, his prestige became such that he flew to Africa, expecting to be introduced into a Sultan's harem, but he discovered that Moorish ideas of a doctor's role were different.

MR. FLEXNER'S is a soberer and more thoughtful story, in part recapitulating the theories of education so brilliantly expounded in 1930 in his book, "Universities." Though his father had begun his American life as a peddler, Flexner was brought up in a home which respected learning; in it there were "no children's books and no trash." This man, whose later life was to be lived in close association with the greatest millionaires, learned early to believe that character was developed by "self-reliance amidst hardship." He learned, too, to speak his mind frankly. Late in life he wondered why he had been invited to join the Rockefeller General Education Board. "Because you would think of things that did not occur to us," he was told.

THE LAUGHING LEADER

Mr. Sullivan suggests, but refrains from, drawing a comparison between the joking and wisecracking at the President's press conference yesterday with the "sound of revelry" in Brussels on the eve of Waterloo

'New World Order'

By Mark Sullivan

Presidential Press Parley Almost Gay

IT WAS, or is likely to turn out to be, one of the important dates in history. It was the day when there was being signed in Berlin what Berlin described as a "historical document," designed to bring about a "new world order"—a pact of Germany, Italy and Japan, in which they carved the world and distributed most of the pieces to each other. It was a pact presumed to be aimed in part at the United States, likely to draw us further toward co-operation with Britain, farther toward war.

On that day—apparently fateful for us and for the world—came one of President Roosevelt's semiweekly press conferences. As the conference ended and we emerged from the White House door Mr. Alfred D. Stedman, of the St. Paul Pioneer Press, remarked to the writer of this column, "Well, if we go to war, we go gaily." Mr. Stedman said it smiling; he shared the spirit of fun that had infused the conference. And indeed there were many who felt that perhaps this was as good a way as any to look crisis in the face; or at least were the beneficiaries of an interlude of light-heartedness interrupting the anxious tension which the newspaper headlines and the radio generated.

THE POEMS and other forms of literature which purport to preserve for history the eves of great events, are notoriously inexact, they lack authentic detail—one is conscious that Byron was not an actual witness of what he described in the "Night Before Waterloo." It may, therefore, be a service to the muse of history, if not to that of poetry, to sketch the press conference, held by the head of the most powerful nation in the world on September, 27, 1940.

The jest that opened the conference came upon the President's initiative. It was too esoteric, the joke was too dependent upon familiarity with personalities present at the conference, to be explained fully here. It is enough to say the point had to do with the fact that one of the newspapermen, alleged to have Republican leanings, was wearing a pair of those Indian type moccasins now in some vogue. This was made to sustain a jocose allusion to Tammany. If the pun seems a little attenuated, it was not necessarily so to those who were present and understood.

For characterizing another of the President's puns, I commit one myself, and confidently assert it was the "rankest" pun ever perpetrated by a President or anyone else. Justification for this superlativeness of judgment will appear as the tale unfolds. It started with some allusion to army officers who were to be elevated in rank, as an incident of army expansion. A newspaperman, sharing the spirit of fun and group intimacy, made some kind of amiable wise-crack about higher rank for the President's well-liked military aide and secretary, Brig. Gen. Edwin M. Watson. The President's reply, which in that genial atmosphere was good for a hearty laugh, was that that was just a rank story.

Among some unimportant news announcements the President gave out, he said he was going to make a week-end inspection trip of certain military units and munitions plants, which he listed, along upper Chesapeake Bay. Mr. J. Fred Essary, of the Baltimore Sun, asked if the President's trip would cover any points not mentioned in his announcement. Mr. Roosevelt, assuming a manner of startled concern lest he was overlooking something, asked if there were any other points he ought to see. Mr. Essary replied that there were some, which he would confide to the President privately. He managed to convey an impression that was good for a laugh—an impression of friendly watchfulness for the President's interests, combined with care that Mr. Essary's journalistic bailiwick should have the largest possible benefit from the President's trip.

A newspaper man recalled that it has been Mr. Roosevelt's way, in previous election campaigns, to make a private prediction of the outcome, which he sealed in an envelope, and put in a drawer of his desk, to await the time when the accuracy of his prediction would be tested by the actual outcome. Had Mr. Roosevelt, the newspaper man asked, done this in the present campaign? Mr. Roosevelt replied that yes, he had, his prediction was right here in his desk, which he patted confidently. The newspaper man then asked a leading question designed, if Mr. Roosevelt fell for it, to bring out the nature of the prediction Mr. Roosevelt has already made. Mr. Roosevelt did not fall for the question. But he managed to convey that his prediction, already made, was of victory for himself. Subtly he conveyed more. He conveyed that if he were making the prediction today, he would predict a victory greater than that which he had confided to the envelope put in his desk some time ago. All this Mr. Roosevelt managed subtly to convey by saying that, as everybody knows, he is habitually given to under-statement.

THE LAUGH that followed that did not depend upon the fraternal intimacy of the group that heard it. That was really funny. That was good for a laugh in any group, anywhere, any time.

Interspersed among the quips that made up the major color and spirit of this press conference there were, of course, serious questions. One was about the momentous event of the day—the pact then signed in Berlin. Mr. Roosevelt replied that he did not yet fully know the contents of it, and suggested that the newspaper men ask the State Department later in the day.

This sketch of a Presidential press conference in Washington, D. C., on September 27, 1940, refrains from soliciting comparison with the late Lord Byron's description of events in Brussels on the eve of June 18, 1815. But one derives a faintly comforting reflection. If there was, on the eve of Waterloo, "a sound of revelry by night"—well, it was the revelers, the British, who won the battle next day.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Demagogic Blarney

ANOTHER POINT on which President Roosevelt resorted to demagogic blarney in that speech of his to the teamsters' union was his reference to the employment of labor spies by soulless corporations. That certainly was dirty pool, and the result of the spying was cruel persecution, all to the detriment of labor's right to organize, now established by law.

But in putting down espionage by the employers the Social-Democrats have encouraged the labor skates and Communists to establish their own spy systems, and in that respect the remedy is as evil as the wrong which it was intended to redress. This result may not have been foreseen, but it has been so apparent that nobody who is familiar with conditions can deny that labor unions now spy on their own members, on non-members and on the employing companies.

YOU MAY THINK that the unions, if they spy at all on members, do it for their own good, but you can't afford to be naive about these things. They pry into the most private affairs of their members and punish them terribly if they catch them out of line. In Chicago a rebellious faction of the flat janitors' union published a paper in which they complained bitterly of espionage by the business agents, who had a beautiful graft established by themselves. The agents voted to award to themselves any difference between the pay which the members received and the pay which they should have received under the union scale.

The agents were the ones who decided whether the members were kicking back a portion of their pay to the employers. They spied on the members and the employers both, and the members lived in a state of suspicion and terror suggestive of Nazi Germany. They went in for sabotage and vandalism in a big way, too, and under Mr. Roosevelt's law, the persecuted members and the citizens owning the property have no way of seeking information.

THE UNIONS have a card system similar to that of the police in the dictator countries of Europe. When a man moves from one town to another he must report to the union and show his card in good order and pay a big transfer tax. Even in his home town when he wants a job he may be required to apply to the union, and if the union catches him on a job which he has hustled for himself the agent can have him fined some disastrous sum or even expelled.

In applying to the union for work the member may be dealing with a low-lived thief who will demand a day's or a week's pay for sending him out on a good job, and otherwise send him out on a fake call when his turn comes or drop his name back to the bottom of the list on the pretext that he didn't answer when called. There are good jobs and bad ones. It may be a short-term job or too far from the man's home. Nevertheless, any job counts as a turn at bat, so to speak. Some of these agents are the dirtiest vermin alive, and no employer ever could have been more greedy and heartless.

IN THE NEWSPAPER shops, which have contracts with the Communist-controlled Newspaper Guild, spies snoop and listen at the scuttle-butts and pore over confidential papers whenever they can. And this Muscovite fifth column has had the gall to state the proposition that the Labor Board must compel employers to retain hostile and suspected employes in secretarial positions in which they may gather information of interest to the Communist Party.

As a matter of fact, employers should be not merely allowed but encouraged to employ spies in industries having to do with the production of explosives and arms. But the Communists and even the Nazis are protected because they are employes, and an employer is not allowed to fire them as Communists or Nazis even though they admit it.

Mr. Roosevelt, of course, knows all this to be true, but he was electioneering in that speech, and you couldn't expect him to tell the other half of the truth. The other half would have been especially offensive to the teamsters whose own system of espionage and dictatorship in the Pacific Northwest is the nearest thing to Hitler's terrorism that this country has seen in our time.

'More Of Everything'

Lothian Tells Britain's Needs

LORD LOTHIAN, the British Ambassador, said after a call on President Roosevelt yesterday that Great Britain would welcome from this country all kinds of supplies, sent with the greatest possible speed.

Asked specifically what was Britain's "greatest need," the Ambassador told reporters:

"More of everything, and quick."

Lothian called at the White House to present Sir Walter Layton, member of the Council of British Ministry of Supply in charge of formulation of the munitions program. Also present was Neville Butler, counselor of the British Embassy.

Sir Walter said he was here for "consultation with the British purchasing commission and the departments of the administration dealing with supplies for Great Britain."

HE SAID HE GAVE the President a broad picture of Britain's production program and was "personally not concerned with specific things from this country but with all of them."

Layton predicted "a hotter fight next spring," adding:

"Our preparations a year hence are extremely important, but won't be any good unless we can hold them off until next March.

"Therefore, the thing is speed, speed, speed."

Asked whether Britain would seek more American destroyers, Lord Lothian replied:

"I DON'T THINK we'd refuse anything."

Before going to the White House, Lord Lothian spent an hour with Secretary of State Hull and other State Department aides. The Ambassador said the conference was devoted largely to discussion of problems created by the new bases which this country will build on British island possessions in the Atlantic. He asserted that the new Berlin-Rome-Tokyo alliance and the Pacific situation were discussed generally.

Shortly before the British officials called, Mr. Roosevelt received a delegation of 87 men and women from all parts of the country who urged further immediate aid to Great Britain.

A delegation favoring expanded assistance to Britain discussed this project with the President and afterward described themselves as "enthusiastically encouraged." Chester Rowell, editor of the San Francisco Chronicle, who acted as spokesman for the group, declined to reveal Mr. Roosevelt's direct reaction.

"We are confident that the same sentiment will support every additional aid to Britain which you will find possible on the principle that Britain is now the first line of American defense," he said.

Rowell told the President that as long as that line remained intact this country was secure from immediate menace and had time to prepare against whatever may later "impend in the present dangerous state of mankind." He urged a policy of "speed and boldness."

SPOKESMEN FOR the William Allen White Committee, sponsors of the "Aid to Britain" drive, recently itemized Britain's most critical needs as 50 of the four-engined Boeing Army bombers, a fleet of United States Navy torpedo boats and the Army's closely guarded bomb-sight.

Rowell, asked whether his delegation urged release of the bombers, declined a specific answer, but pointed out that William Allen White Committee members were among his delegates. His was not a White delegation as such, however, Rowell emphasized.

In addition to Rowell, the committee calling at the White House included Barry Bingham, publisher, and Herbert Agar, editor, of the Louisville Courier-Journal; Lewis Douglas, president of the Mutual Life Insurance Co. and former budget director; Maury Maverick, mayor of San Antonio; Charles H. Hall, Greenwich, Conn.; Mrs. Roland Gray, of Boston.

Official English Translation Of Text of Three-Power Pact

Berlin, Sept. 27 (AP).—Following is the official English translation of the Treaty of Berlin signed today:

THREE-POWER PACT BETWEEN GERMANY, ITALY AND JAPAN.

The governments of Germany, Italy and Japan, considering it as a condition precedent of any lasting peace that all nations of the world be given each its own proper place, have decided to stand by and cooperate with one another in regard to their efforts in greater East Asia and regions of Europe, respectively, wherein it is their prime purpose to establish and maintain a new order of things calculated to promote the mutual prosperity and welfare of the peoples concerned.

Furthermore, it is the desire of the three governments to extend cooperation to such nations in other spheres of the world as may be inclined to put forth endeavors along lines similar to their own, in order that their ultimate aspirations for world peace may thus be realized.

Accordingly, the governments of Germany, Italy and Japan have agreed as follows:

ARTICLE ONE

Japan recognizes and respects the leadership of Germany and Italy in establishment of a new order in Europe.

ARTICLE TWO

Germany and Italy recognize and respect the leadership of Japan in the establishment of a new order in Greater East Asia.

ARTICLE THREE

Germany, Italy and Japan agree to cooperate in their efforts on aforesaid lines. They further undertake to assist one another with all political, economic and military means when one of the three contracting powers is attacked by a power at present not involved in the European war or in the Chinese-Japanese conflict.

ARTICLE FOUR

With the view to implementing the present pact, joint technical commissions, members which are to be appointed by the respective governments of Germany, Italy and Japan, will meet without delay.

ARTICLE FIVE

Germany, Italy and Japan affirm that the aforesaid terms do not in any way affect the political status which exists at present as between each of three contracting parties and Soviet Russia.

ARTICLE SIX

The present pact shall come into effect immediately upon signature and shall remain in force ten years from the date of its coming into force. At the proper time before expiration of said term, the high contracting parties shall at the request of any of them enter into negotiations for its renewal.

In faith whereof, the undersigned duly authorized by their respective governments have signed this pact and have affixed their signatures.

Residents Get Job Preferment In D. C. Agencies

The Commissioners yesterday reminded municipal heads to prefer bona fide District residents when making recommendations for departmental jobs.

In case an out-of-town person is selected, the Commissioners would like to know what efforts have been made to obtain a qualified District resident for the position.

It is the policy of the Commissioners to appoint, wherever possible, District residents to positions in the District Government, they said. The department head must also, when selecting a nonresident, submit a full justification as to the reason for recommending the employment of other than a District resident.

Protestants Plan Retreat Tonight

Lay and clergy officials of ten Protestant churches and six denominations of Southeast Washington will hold a retreat tonight at 8 at Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, Fourth and B streets southeast.

Prelude to the "Church Loyalty Crusade," a preparatory stage of the local phase of the National Christian Mission in February, the retreat will have as speakers Dr. J. Lowrey Fendrich, pastor of the host church; Dr. George Bennett, president of the Southeast Interchurch Council and Wilson Memorial pastor, and the Rev. Edward Gabler, pastor of Christ Episcopal Church (Navy Yard).

After a dinner the guests will meet in the church auditorium for a service.

James C. Wilkes, G. O. P. Chief Here, Hurt in Collision

James C. Wilkes, 41, chairman of the Republican State committee of the District, was "resting comfortably" at Emergency Hospital last night following a collision between his automobile and a coal truck yesterday.

With his wife, Mrs. Edna Wilkes, the attorney was driving at Fourteenth and Madison streets northwest when the accident occurred. He suffered a brain concussion.

Police said the truck was operated by Easton Spencer, colored, 21, of 2412 Seventeenth street northwest, who was uninjured.

As the result of another accident Motorcycle Policeman A. K. Bowen, 35, was in Casualty Hospital with head injuries and cuts.

National Airport Dedication Today

DRAWING FOR FIRST-LANDING PRIVILEGE

President Roosevelt will lay the cornerstone of the Terminal Building for the new Washington National Airport beginning at 2 p. m. today.

Civilian aeronautics officials last night completed plans for the ceremonies, which have twice been postponed, with what they described as a "promise" of fair skies from the Weather Bureau.

All civil flying will be halted in the Washington area at 2 p. m., when ground traffic on the field will be stopped and spectators required to be in their places in the grandstand. The Mount Vernon Memorial Highway will be closed to northbound traffic between Alexandria and the Arlington Memorial Bridge from 1 to 3 p. m.

At 2:13 p. m., President Roosevelt is to arrive at a stand 500 feet in front of the Terminal Building to signal the first plane landings on the $13,000,000 field. American Airlines won the honor of sending the first plane down the runways in a drawing held yesterday at C. A. A. headquarters. Ships from the Pennsylvania-Central and Eastern Airlines will follow. Planes representing the Army, Navy and Coast Guard then will land.

Passengers in the first transport plane will include Otto Praeger, Second Assistant Postmaster General in the Wilson Cabinet and "father of American civil aviation," and James Clark Edgerton, pilot for the first regular mail flight in the United States. Edgerton took off from the Potomac Park polo fields for historic flight to New York in 1918.

Wars Are Fraying Gentlemen's Cuffs

DEMONSTRATING HIS SKILL at the Goodwill Industries conference is J. S. Carper. Observing are Oliver A. Friedman, executive secretary, National Goodwill Industries, and Miss Frances Ford, Goodwill Industries director in New York City.

Men aren't the dudes they used to be.

The subject cropped up at the annual conference of the second, third and fourth regions of Goodwill Industries here yesterday.

Miss Frances Ford, Goodwill Industries director in New York City, said that in times past her branch of the organization seldom received men's clothing that was frayed at the cuffs or too worn at the knees and seat.

It isn't true today and it's the case, she said, in the other industries throughout the United States.

She thinks "the depression" may have something to do with it or that the war in Europe and the Far East might be responsible. She has learned that the best clothing is being sent to the war sufferers and what is left to the industries and similar organizations.

It's all the same, observed Miss Ford, a motherly appearing woman who constantly marvels at how men who once were so well along in the world can take decline so gracefully. She describes the spirit in her organization as "wonderful."

As typical of this, she mentioned a banker of one-time international connections who now is working in the New York Industries. He said he had found something wonderful in the work. A former Chautauqua lecturer viewed his situation likewise, she said.

Attending the meeting are Col. A. R. Brindley, Washington, chairman, Goodwill Industries National Training School Commission; the Rev. A. G. Curry, Pittsburgh Industries; Oliver A. Friedman, director, Milwaukee Industries and executive secretary of the National Association of Industries; J. W. Willcox, Philadelphia Industries; the Rev. John S. German, Baltimore Industries; Percy J. Trevethan, Boston Industries, and W. Harold Snape, Washington Industries director and recording secretary of the national association.

Orphanage Plans 125th Anniversary Pageant

"What are we going to do have a thow? Where doeth thith go, Mith Swithhelm?"

Nursery school children at Hillcrest, Washington city orphan asylum, were excited yesterday when rehearsals for the 125th anniversary pageant, to be presented October 10, were moved into the playroom of their building. All of them were anxious to help Miss Dorothy Swisshelm, superintendent of the home, who wrote and is directing it.

The pageant traces the history of the institution which was founded by Marcia Burns Van Ness (Mrs. John P. Van Ness) at a time when orphan children were usually housed with the indigent aged in dismal almshouses. Dolly Madison was the first director of the board of managers and the original name was "The Washington Female Orphan Asylum."

The asylum was established to provide care for children orphaned as a result of the War of 1812. Mrs. Van Ness, whose husband was Gen. Van Ness, was the moving spirit and enlisted the cooperation of other generous Washingtonians. The organization meeting was held in the Hall of Representatives of the Capitol, October 10, 1815.

A small frame house, four rooms and a lean-to, was rented for $120 a year, located on Tenth street, north of Pennsylvania avenue.

In 1865, the asylum occupied a rented building on I street, between Second and Third and, in 1876, moved to a building vacated by the State Department at Fourteenth and S streets. In 1927, assisted by contributions from Edwin Gould, of New York, it moved to the present site on Nebraska between Massachusetts and Wisconsin avenues.

The program will be at 3 o'clock and also will include the planting of trees in memory of Mrs. Van Ness and Dolly Madison and tea at Van Ness cottage.

Jews to Greet New Year 5701 On Wednesday

Synagogues Plan Special Rituals For Rosh Hashanah

Followers of Judaism will kneel on Wednesday at sundown in the hush of synagogues to welcome Rosh Hashanah, their New Year 5701, with Maariv rites of prayer and meditation.

RABBI LOEB

As they return to houses of worship on Thursday morning, the traditional blasts of the ram's horn (shofar) will remind them of the need for repentance and reflection. Spiritual leaders will bring messages on issues vital to the life of world Jewry.

The Rosh Hashanah rites, following custom, are divided into three parts—the Malchroth, Zichronoth and Shofroth, with 30 trumpet blasts blown at the conclusion of each section and 10 final blasts.

In the average Jewish family the New Year is ushered in by preparation of delicacies and sweetmeats, including honey, symbolizing a sweet and pleasant New Year.

The home also is provided with the customary wine for Kiddish (sanctification of the Holy Day) and two white loaves of finely-wrought chaloths for blessing at the festive board.

Cantor Adolph Vygoda, erstwhile European cantor, recently arrived from Budapest, and now affiliated with the Beth Sholom Congregation and Talmud Torah, will conduct his first high holiday services in this country at the above synagogue, Eighth and Shepherd streets northwest, on October 3 and 4, 11 and 12. In previous years Cantor Vygoda held services in practically all the capitols and larger cities on the European continent.

He is not only a cantor and concertist, but is a composer as well. At present he is training his own symphonic choir and practically all the music used by them will be of his own composition.

Shortly after his arrival to these shores he composed and dedicated to President Roosevelt a hymn entitled "A Hymn of Gratitude," which was accepted and acknowledged by the President. Since his arrival he has rendered concerts in Philadelphia, New York, Chicago and Boston, as well as in the District.

Leaders of Chev Sholom Congregation, Fifth and I streets northwest, have announced that Boris Schiffman, cantor and concert and opera star, will conduct the Rosh Hashanah rites there at 5 p. m. on Wednesday and also on Thursday and Friday mornings.

Assisted by a New York double symphonic choir, Cantor Schiffman also will conduct the Slichoth services tonight at 12:30 midnight at Chev Sholom.

CANTOR SCHIFFMAN

Rabbi Julius Loeb, a former spiritual leader of the Southeast Hebrew Congregation and other Jewish bodies, and now executive secretary of the Committee on Yeshivoth and Benevolent Institutions under the Combined Hebrew Congregations of Washington, has issued the following statement, as the high holidays near:

"From amid the storms of adversity and the harrowing scenes of world war, Israel is setting forth to meet and greet another new year in the annals of its eventful career.

"We shudder at the very thought of a collapse of European civilization, and of the destruction of the efforts of many generations. With consternation we perceive the rumblings and rushing movement in fear of enemy attacks even upon the peaceful shores of this Western Continent.

"Standing midway between the existing nations and creeds, and bearing the 'sins of the many,' the brunt of all evils, Israel in dispersion and capitivity is the logical and natural carrier of the warning voice of justice in a world steeped in sin, and bedimmed with sorrow and distress.

"What we Jews should learn from this great world tragedy is that our happy anticipation and looking forward to freedom and surcease in the civilization and culture proved to be a chimera; that the high hopes we had laid on the spread of arts and secular knowledge, and the continuous process of emancipation, has meant for us to be leaning on a broken reed.

"What we should do is to fortify our position in the sacred faith of our ancestors, which has kept and sustained us in all succeeding ages. Let us hold fast to this, our first and only line of defense—the Torah, the Light of the World."

Dr. Marshall to Preach

"The Man With the Bowler Hat" has been chosen as Dr. Peter Marshall's sermon theme for tomorrow at 11 a. m. at New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. The Federation of Women will hold its first fall meeting on Monday at 8 p. m. in the lecture room.

Dr. Bryan Will Speak At Cathedral

Dr. John Stewart Bryan, president of William and Mary College, Williamsburg, Va., and publisher of the Richmond (Va.) News-Leader, will speak tomorrow at 4 p. m. in Washington Cathedral at the thirty-third anniversary service of placing of the foundation stone and the seventeenth anniversary of the consecration of the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., LL. D., as third Bishop of Washington.

Bishop Freeman will conduct the service, assisted by the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, D. D., dean of Washington, and others of the Cathedral staff of clergy.

Dr. Bryan, one of the leading educators and publishers in America, will speak on "Opportunity of the Cathedral in the Future of America."

Crosses on Display

Following the service the Cathedral's unique and valuable collection of historic crosses will be on public exhibition for the first time, in the North Transept's Statesmen's Corner, until 7 p. m.

The collection, containing more than 50 crosses of silver, gold, rock crystal, wood, enamel and precious stones, was given to Washington Cathedral in 1925 by the late Mrs. James T. Leavitt, of Washington and Boston, in memory of her husband.

Included in the collection are the crystal reliquary containing a splinter of the true cross, the coptic crosses from the ancient Abyssinian Church, Processional cross of Pope Paul V., and a Portuguese cross said to have been given to Christopher Columbus by Queen Isabella of Spain.

Canon Dunlap to Preach

The cross given to the late Right Rev. Henry Yates Satterlee, D. D., the first Bishop of Washington, by the Armenian Church in recognition of efforts in its behalf, has been added to the collection of crosses to be shown tomorrow.

Canon Edward S. Dunlop will preach at the 11 a. m. service.

Other services in Washington Cathedral tomorrow will be the celebration of the Holy Communion in Bethlehem Chapel of the Holy Nativity at 7:30 and 9:30 a. m.

National Christian Mission Program Begins Tomorrow

The first portion of the program of the National Christian Mission will begin tomorrow at Columbia Heights Christian Church with "Whole Church Visitation." This is a part of the church loyalty crusade leading up to the mission in February. "A Definition of Sin" will be the Rev. A. P. Wilson's topic for the morning service.

Ninth Street. "Who Are the Disciples?" will be the subject of the sermon by the Rev. Clifford H. Jope at the worship and communion service tomorrow at 11 a. m.

National City. "The Splendor of Loyalty" will be the theme on which Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller, pastor, will preach tomorrow morning.

The Alpha C. E. alumni group will hold its first meeting of the fall at 6:30 p. m. in the Massachusetts annex. Moving pictures will be shown entitled, "Mobilizing for Mercy," depicting current Red Cross activities in Europe.

Fifteenth Street. The Rev. Leslie L. Bowers will preach at 11 a. m. on "The Transformed Life."

Third. "A Soldier at Worship" will be the Rev. C. N. Williams' sermon theme for tomorrow at 11 a. m.

J. W. Taylor to Speak

James W. Taylor, president of the Luther League of the Maryland Synod, will be guest speaker tomorrow at 7 p. m. at Georgetown Lutheran Church, where youths will join in a United Lutheran Church-wide celebration of Luther League Day. A fellowship supper is set for 6 p. m.

Church of the Week

Brookland Baptist Group To Celebrate 60th Birthday

Congregation Proposes Historical Pageant On Feb. 9; Drive Also Is Planned To Amortize Outstanding Debt of $70,000

Historic Brookland Baptist Church, Sixteenth and Monroe streets northeast, is now mapping plans to celebrate its sixtieth birthday on February 9 and 10, 1941.

Rev. Mr. Stith

The Rev. M. Chandler Stith, pastor since 1937, pointed out yesterday that the congregation is hoping to stage a historical pageant on the opening day, and has invited Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention, and other church leaders to address worship services. A fellowship dinner is set for the following night.

A forecast of the future, with plans for inaugurating a drive to amortize the present outstanding church debt of $70,000 is expected to be another feature of the anniversary occasion, according to the Rev. Mr. Stitch, who lauded his members' cooperation in helping reduce the debt from $97,000 in the past three years.

The congregation, which hopes to have a new house of worship within the next five years, has been worshipping since 1926 in the assembly hall of its modern four-story $227,000 religious educational building. One of the largest and most complete units of its kind in Washington, it has accommodations for 85 classes in eight departments, with 105 teachers and officers. C. M. Long is church school superintendent.

Membership of 781

Brookland has a church membership of 781, with an average attendance of 450, and a church school enrollment of 1,047, with an average attendance of 554.

In line with the added emphasis on the Baptist Training Union plan here, Brookland Church now has five unions under the general direction of Wilmer Bennett. Leaders are Miss Virginia Magruder and Miss Elizabeth Gaither, seniors; Mrs. W. P. Smith, intermediates; Mrs. D. D. Whitcraft, juniors, and Mr. Stith, adults.

The Union's purpose is to train church leadership, explained the clergyman, whose church will be the scene of the District of Columbia Sunday School Association-sponsored city-wide Church School Institute from December 2 to 6. The unions meet in individual sessions at 6:45 p. m. on Sundays, opening and closing with general assemblies.

Among other leaders of Brookland Church are Mrs. H. C. Butler, president of the Women's Missionary Union; Mrs. E. L. Carlton, Young Women's Guild president; Carleton M. Long, chairman of the board of deacons; James May, chairman, board of trustees; Mrs. Lucy Mayo, president of the Ladies' Aid Society, and E. L. Carlton, finance committee chairman.

While the church's only charter member, Mrs. John Wignall, died recently, there are still several members with long-time connections, among them J. L. Sherwood, manager of the Brookland branch of the Hamilton National Bank and president of the Northeast Building Association; the Misses Anna and Lucy Lynch, and others. Many families of the charter members are still actively carrying on the work.

Founded in 1880

The congregation was founded in 1880 by John B. Lord, father-in-law of Mr. Sherwood; Isaac Quackenbausch, father of the late Mrs. Wignall, with the initial services held in Lord's home. The Queenstown Chapel was erected on what is now Michigan and South Dakota avenues. Honoring his name, the present Brookland edifice is called the John B. Lord Memorial Building.

After nine years there, the congregation built an attractive frame chapel at Twelfth and Newton streets northeast, where they worshiped until 1926, when the structure was destroyed by fire.

Kentucky-born, the Rev. Mr. Stith was educated at John B. University at Deland, Fla., and the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville. Before coming here, he served in pulpits in Miami and Jacksonville.

U. P. and Memorial Presbyterians Will Hold Rally Day

Rally day will be observed tomorrow at River Road United Presbyterian and Westminster Memorial Presbyterian Churches with special exercises.

Cub Pack 23 will be special guests at the River Road service at 11 a. m., when the Rev. Virgil M. Cosby will speak on "The Call to Service."

Exercises of the Westminster Church School at 10 a. m. will include closing sessions of the summer Bible school. The Rev. Harry V. Porter will preach at 11 a. m. on "Jesus Only."

Church of the Pilgrims. Dr. Andrew R. Bird will speak tomorrow at 11 a. m., on "The Meek Shall Inherit the Earth," and at 7:45 p. m. on "Weights That Wing Our Way."

Central. "The Need of Faith" and "The Message of the Prophet Joel" will be Dr. James R. Taylor's sermon theme for tomorrow morning and evening.

Dr. Briggs to Speak

Dr. John E. Briggs, senior minister, will preach tomorrow morning at Fifth Baptist Church on the theme "When Weights Become Wings." J. Herrick Hall, junior minister, will speak in the evening on "The Voice in the Wilderness." A large choir will feature Eggert's "O Love That Wilt Not Let Me Go," with Mrs. Marjory League Hughes as solist.

Dr. J. W. Rustin Will Speak In Kansas City

Mount Vernon Place Pastor Will Attend National Mission

Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, will speak on Monday through Friday in Kansas City, Mo., as a member of the National Christian Mission sponsored by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. It comes here in February.

Dr. Rustin will address his congregation tomorrow at 11 a. m. on "Does God Need You?" and at 8 p. m. on "We Are Not Our Own."

Francis Asbury. The congregation will hear Dr. G. Ellis Williams, superintendent of the West Washington Methodist District, tomorrow at 11 a. m. on "Our Fundamental Need." At 8 p. m. Dr. Robin Gould will preach on "Steady Eyes."

Hamline. "Today's Supreme Challenge" will be the sermon subject of Dr. H. W. Burgan tomorrow at 11 a. m. The church nursery will be in use from 10:45 a. m. to 12:15 p. m. for children whose parents desire to attend the morning public worship services.

Lincoln Road. Homecoming Week will be observed tomorrow with Dr. R. H. Stone speaking at 11 a. m. on the topic, "Mankind's Deepest Longing." At 8 p. m. Dr. Chesteen Smith will preach, after which a service of dedication will be held for church officers.

Douglas. The Rev. William F. Wright will occupy the pulpit tomorrow at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. The Sunday Evening Guild and Epworth League will meet at 7 p. m. under the leadership of Eunice Gross and Howard Cornell. At a recent quarterly conference Gilbert T. Williams was elected to the board of trustees.

Metropolitan. The Rev. W. A. Keese will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m. on "Finding Reality in Prayer," third in a series of sermons. The charter meeting of the Women's Society of Christian Service will be at 4 p. m.

Waugh. The sermon subject for the morning service will be "My Service." The Rev. Clarkson R. Banes will preach and conduct a special installation service for officers of "The Woman's Society of Christian Service."

Ryland. Rally Day will be observed tomorrow in all departments of the church life.

At the 11 a. m. service the theme of the Rev. Karl G. Newell will be "Go Ye."

Eldebrooke. The 11 a. m. service tomorrow will be in charge of Dr. W. M. Michael, who will preach on "Developing an Adequate Apostleship." Mrs. E. C. Pugh, director of department of motion puictures for the District W. C. T. U., will be the guest speaker at 8 p. m., and will present a temperance film entitled "The Beneficent Reprobate."

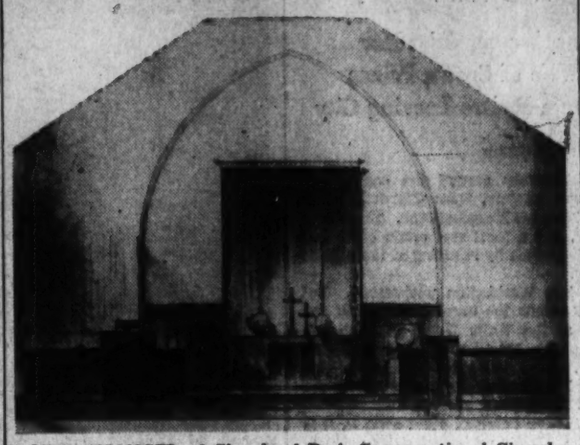
Wesley. The Rev. J. Luther Neff will preach at the 11 a. m. service on "Getting a Lift for Life."

McKendree. The Rev. Samuel E. Rose will preach on "Vision in the Temple" tomorrow at 11 a. m.

Union. Dr. John R. Edwards will preach at 11 a. m. tomorrow on "Registration" and at 8 p. m. on "Opening the Seals." Stevenson's anthem, "I Sought the Lord," will be sung by the choir at the morning worship hour.

Foundry. Emphasizing Rally Day in the religious educational program of the church at the 11 a. m. service tomorrow Dr. F. B. Harris will present Bibles to the boys and girls who are being promoted from the primary to the junior department of the church school. His sermon subject will be "A Little Robe."

Cleveland Park Congregation Will Dedicate New Chancel



NEW CHANCEL of Cleveland Park Congregational Church

Members and friends of the Cleveland Park Congregational Church tomorrow at 11 a. m. will join in dedication exercises for the new chancel.

The completed chancel is the second stage in a church improvement program begun last Spring with installation of pews, rostrum enlargement and carpeting of the nave and chancel. Chancel pieces are the gifts of various friends of the church. The project was encouraged and supported by the Men's Club. The Rev. Paul W. Yinger, pastor, will preach on "The Power of the Christian Symbols."

First. "How to Escape Fear" will be the subject of the Rev. Howard Stone Anderson tomorrow at 11 a. m. Musical selections will be furnished by a trio and by Dale Hamilton, bass-barytone.

A 5 o'clock vesper service will honor the Rev. Walter G. Borchers, jr., who has resigned as assistant pastor to accept the pastorate of the Plymouth Congregational Church, in Omaha, Nebr. The Rev. Paul W. Yinger, representing Congregationalists of Washington; Dr. John W. Rustin, representing the Rev. Mr. Borchers' Methodist antecedents; and Dr. William S. Abernethy, representing the downtown fellowship, will give brief addresses honoring him. The choir will return to its loft a week early in order to participate in this service. Immediately following the vesper there will be a reception, with an informal program.

200 Lutheran Men to Attend Omaha Parley

Many reservations are being received for the Lutheran special to the Lutheran Brotherhood Convention in Omaha, Nebr., from the District and Maryland.

Headed by President Harry B. Fogle, of Uniontown, Md., and Chairman Martin A. McGrory, of Washington, 200 Lutheran men will entrain from Baltimore, Washington, Martinsburg, W. Va., and Cumberland, Md.

Leaving Saturday, October 6, the special will call at many points for passengers. There will be divine services in each special car and sermon by a guest traveler.

Austin Cooper will head the local delegation and Carlton Command and Adam G. Snyder, the Baltimore contingent. The conclave is from October 6 to 8.

Lutheran services for tomorrow follow:

Augustana. Holy Communion will be celebrated tomorrow at 11 a. m. Dr. Hjelm will preach the sermon and the church choir under Miss Lila Knudsen will render "Angel Voices Ever Telling" by Bortniansky.

A memorial service honoring the late Senator Ernest Lundeen will be held at 4 p. m. under auspices of the Minnesota State Society of Washington. Members of Congress and the Diplomatic Corps have been invited to attend.

Takoma. "Why Pray?" is the subject of the sermon which the Rev. J. Adrian Pfeiffer will deliver tomorrow at 11 a. m. In the afternoon the Luther League, accompanied by friends, will leave the church at 2 o'clock to hold a vesper service at Sugar Loaf Mountain.

Grace. Rally Day exercises in the church school will feature tomorrow's worship program. They will be conducted at 9:45 a. m., under leadership of Capt. Frank Stutz, superintendent. Because of the rally service, matins at 8:45 is being omitted.

Morning worship will be at 11 o'clock, with Dr. Gerhard E. Lenski, pastor, in charge. Outlining the church's fall program, he will preach on "This One Thing I Do."

St. Mark's. Rally day services will be held in the Sunday school and church. Dr. B. Bieber will assist the Rev. J. Luther Frantz with the 11 a. m. service and preach the sermon. George Harris will be the guest speaker in the Sunday school.

Reformation. "Hosea, the Prophet of Forgiving Love," will be the subject of the sermon of Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder tomorrow at 8 o'clock. At the 11 o'clock service he will preach on "The God Who Speaks."

Luther Place. The Rev. Carl W. Folkemer, assistant pastor, will preach on "Getting at the Heart of Things" at the 11 o'clock service tomorrow. Rally and promotion day will be celebrated throughout the Sunday school at 9:45 a. m.

St. Paul's. The annual rally day service and conferring of awards in the Sunday school will be held tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. Mrs. Ruth Kincer Webb, a member of the congregation, will deliver the address and L. G. Schmidt, the general superintendent, will be in charge.

Calvary Baptist School Plans Rally Day

Rally Day will be observed by the Sunday school of Calvary Baptist Church in the church auditorium tomorrow at 9:45 a. m. The United States and Christian flags will be presented to the church by Bert H. Wise, superintendent, as a token of loyalty and love on the part of the Sunday school. The American flag will be carried by George T. Aldridge, Vaughn class member for almost 50 years. J. Roger Sanders, of the young people's department, will carry the Christian flag.

Chevy Chase. Loyalty Sunday will be observed tomorrow with a message by the Rev. Edward O. Clark entitled "Launch Out Into the Deep." A number of visitation teams will engage in a spiritual and social visitation under the direction of J. H. J. Yule this week, in preparation for World Communion Sunday.

Promotion Day will be observed in the Sunday school under direction of George B. Fraser, general superintendent.

Metropolitan. Evangelistic services will continue this week under the leadership of Dr. Harry Rimmer, noted scientist and evangelist. The church voted in its twenty-five hundredth member last Thursday. Pastor John Compton Hall presides at all services, and the assistant pastor, John Ballbach, leads a large volunteer choir of young people. Dr. Rimmer will continue through October 6.

First. "The Winds of God" will be the subject of the sermon by Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden tomorrow at 11 a. m. at First Baptist Church. The senior choir, under the direction of Harwood Hall, will sing "Beautiful Savior," by Christiansen, the solo part being taken by Ruth Reumann Hall. At the evening service Dr. Pruden's topic will be "Hilarious Living."

Bishop Freeman Will Observe 17th Anniversary

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will mark the seventeenth anniversary of his consecration by preaching tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Epiphany Episcopal Church, his one-time pulpit.

Also planned for the occasion—Feast of St. Michael's and All Angels, will be Holy Communion at 8 a. m.; church school and junior Bible class at 9:30 a. m. and adult class at 10 a. m.; Young People's Fellowship, 6 p. m. and evening prayer at 8 p. m. with Dr. Francis Yarnell, vicar of Epiphany Chapel, preaching.

St. John's. Dr. Oliver J. Hart will preach his farewell sermon as rector at 11 a. m. Dr. and Mrs. Hart will leave the early part of the week for Boston, where he will become rector of Trinity Church. There will be a celebration of the Holy Communion at 8 a. m.

Ascension. The services tomorrow will be Holy Communion at 8 a. m., and morning prayer, with sermon by the Rev. Raymond L. Wolven, at 11 a. m.

"THE KING OF LOVE MY SHEPHERD IS"
The King of love my Shepherd is,
Whose goodness faileth never;
I nothing lack if I am His,
And He is mine forever.
Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS
This hymn of simple and sincere faith, inspired by the 23rd psalm, was written by a wealthy baronet, who, despite his fame and riches, spent much of his time in Christian service. It emphasizes that the real test of a shepherd's love is his willingness to endure when the foolish sheep strays.

Norse Princess Slips Quietly Into Town

Minister Morgenstierne Accompanies Her In Search of House; Wife of Crown Prince Also Visits White House Before Leaving City

By Dudley Harmon

THAT COUPLE motoring unobtrusively around the countryside yesterday, just like any other house hunters, were Crown Princess Martha of Norway and Norwegian Minister Morgenstierne. They were in search of a residence near here, and a local real estate office had thoughtfully imparted a Scandinavian touch by selecting as their guide an agent who was born in Denmark.

It's not often that royalty slips into Washington unobserved. But the princess arrived on Wednesday minus the usual brass bands and silk-hatted officials, and has been at the White House with no one the wiser except the Roosevelts and the Minister. Though the First Lady was in town briefly this week, she held no press conference. The ladies of the press wondered yesterday whether she'd been saving the "scoop" of the crown princess' visit for her own column.

But, Mrs. Roosevelt's sense of fair play being as great as it is, it is more probable that Princess Martha herself requested strict privacy.

Since her arrival here, after her harrowing trip on the steamer American Legion, her desire has been to lead a quiet life. With Norway under German domination and her husband, Crown Prince Olav, in embattled England, she is not in a mood for gayety.

Several Estates Are Considered

The President has followed up his personal invitation to the princess to come to this country with a never-flagging interest in her welfare while here. He and Mrs. Roosevelt originally discussed the possibility of the royal refugees settling somewhere in the Hyde Park region for the winter. But the pincess prefers to be near the legation.

At first she thought of an apartment in town, but like most mothers of small children, eventually decided to go where they could play outdoors. It is reported that the Oscar Underwood house near Mount Vernon—the former Secretary of War and Mrs. Woodring had it one year—and Marwood, near Potomac, Md., were under consideration. Marwood was leased by Ambassador Joseph Kennedy when he was chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, and he used to take great glee in showing his guests around the palatial residence. High spot of the tour was always the enormous bathroom with its sunken tub with solid gold faucets! There is also a perfectly equipped movie theater in the basement, where Ambassador Kennedy, once a movie magnate himself, used to run off a film when he gave parties.

Princess Returns To Cape Cod

As quietly as she came in, Crown Princess Martha left town last night. She has returned to Cape Cod until later in the season. There she is living quietly in a house loaned by a Pittsburgh friend of the Norwegian Minister. When the weather permits, the princess takes a daily swim and her children play in the sand. For company she has her lady in waiting and the court chamberlain, who accompanied her from Norway, and she sees a few of her neighbors on the Cape.

The last visit Princess Martha paid Washington was marked by all the fuss and feathers of a state tour. She and Prince Olav stopped here last summer for several days just before sailing home after a swing around the country. They were guests of honor at a large reception given at the Norwegian Legation. The princess also met ladies of the press and won everybody with her good looks and charm.

Galloway-Turner Troth Announced

The wedding will take place October 19 at the Church of Our Savior here.

Richard Lyon Gives Party

Entertaining at a "combination" cocktail party and tea dance yesterday afternoon at the Carlton, Richard Lyon feted Miss Madeline Cotter and her fiance, John Lewis Smith, jr., who will be married next Thursday.

Members of the bridal party, including Miss Cotter's two sisters, Clair and Dorothy Cotter, attended the dance between 5 and 7 o'clock. Also there were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cotter, parents of the bride-elect, and Mr. and Mrs. John Lewis Smith.

Tonight Mr. and Mrs. John Parker will entertain at a dinner dance at the Chevy Chase Club for the prospective bride and bridegroom.

Mrs. McCook Knox, Mother Return From Maine Visit

Mrs. McCook Knox and her mother, Mrs. Anson McCook, have returned to Washington after several weeks at York Harbor, Me. En route back to the Capital, they spent two weeks in Boston, where Mrs. McCook, who has been ill, was at the Phillips House.

Mrs. Knox is now at her apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street, but expects to move the first part of October into her home on N street, in Georgetown, which she remodeled several years ago. It has been occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Louchheim, who are about to move into the house at 2824 O street, a few blocks away. The Stanley Woodwards have been living there until this month.

Tuckermans Guests At Gordon Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman motored down to Rappahannock County, Va., yesterday to attend the dinner given by Mrs. Alexander Gordon at her home, Kenmore.

The party was in honor of Mrs. Gordon's sister-in-law, the Duchess of Crussol, who recently arrived from Paris and is being widely entertained by her many friends in Virginia.

Notables Attend Music Appreciation Group's Banquet

A number of social notables gathered at the Mayflower Hotel last evening for a banquet sponsored by the National Committee for Music Appreciation. Several people entertained at cocktails preceding the dinner, among them Mrs. Ffoulke Dewey.

Among the guests were Dr. John Erskine, of New York; Dr. and Mrs. Hans Kindler, Senator and Mrs. Alexander Wiley, Senator Arthur Capper, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Mrs. Eugene Byrnes, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Mr. and Mrs. L. Miss O'Donnell is a graduate in drama of the Carnegie Institute of Technology and is now chief of the continuity department of radio station WOL. Mr. Freund holds three degrees from Georgetown University and is engaged in the practice of law here.

Mrs. McLean Has To Put Off Party For Miss Cromwell

Miss Christine Cromwell, who couldn't get away from her studies to attend Mrs. Lionel Atwill's dinner in her honor last evening, also had to stay at National Park Seminary tonight. So the party which Mrs. Edward Beale McLean had planned for her this evening at Friendship has been postponed indefinitely.

Mrs. Atwill, who is Miss Cromwell's aunt, was hostess informally at dinner last night despite her niece's absence. Besides the guest list published on this page yesterday, those present included Miss Evalyn Washington McLean.

Dr. and Mrs. Lyon To Hold Reception

Dr. and Mrs. James Alexander Lyon will entertain at a reception tomorrow afternoon at their home, Glenview Farm, in Rockville, Md., between the hours of 5 and 7 o'clock.

Guests will include members of the Military Order of the World War, established 20 years ago.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

LADY BAILEY, the former Miss Mildred Bromwell and once a Washington debutante, has been in Washington this week to help with plans for the big polo game next Sunday afternoon, October 6, on Potomac Field, to raise money for the mobile canteens and surgical units of Britain.

Lady Bailey, whose husband is a British admiral, will herself drive one of the ambulances. She has installed her children in this country, but plans to return to England soon.

Miss Charlotte H. Noland has returned to her Middleburg home after visiting New York and Long Island to make final arrangements for the match. It was originally her idea to gather two of the best teams possible to play a game of polo, and with the help of her Foxcroft committee she has left no stones unturned.

Mrs. George A. Garrett, of Washington and Chilly Bleak, in the hunt country, local chairman of the Bundles for Britain, is also working for the success of the match. She personally obtained permission from Secretary Harold Ickes for use of Potomac Field.

Playing on the polo teams will be such famous sporting figures as Robert E. Strawbridge, jr., president of the National Polo Association, who has won the national title six times; Elbridge T. Gerry and his brother, Robert L. Gerry, jr., with handicaps of seven and eight goals; J. Peter Grace, Michael G. Phipps, an international player rated at nine goals, and Winston Guest, nine-goal man. Both Mr. Phipps and Mr. Guest have played with the Fauquier-Loudoun Polo Club.

The teams "Meadowbrook vs. Texas" will be captained by America's two ten-goal men, Cecil Smith, of Texas, and Stewart Iglehart, of New York.

GEN. GEORGE MARSHALL, Chief of Staff, heads the sponsoring committee, which also includes Maj. Gen. John K. Herr, Chief of Cavalry, and many other high-ranking Army officers.

Foxcroft alumnae in Baltimore, headed by Mrs. C. Willing Brown, jr., and Mrs. J. Crosson Cooper, jr., will sell tickets in that city.

In Richmond, Mrs. James Ball, a sister of Miss Noland, Mrs. Kenneth Hawkins and Miss Elizabeth Warren will get to work.

Miss Sarah Warren, of Warrenton, is visiting Miss Jean Gordon in Richmond. The Misses Virginia Calvert and Betsy Charrington motored there with her and are staying with Mrs. Joseph Hunt. The visitors are having a delightful time, among the festivities in their honor being a party given yesterday by Harry Woodward. Tonight Miss Gordon will give a cocktail and supper party for the Warrentonians and they will later attend the dance at the Country Club of Virginia.

Miss Jane Calvert, of Warrenton, and her house guest, Miss Aileen Preston, of New Canaan, Conn., will go to Richmond today to attend the parties.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Littleton, of Middleburg, are being congratulated on the arrival of a daughter on Thursday at Garfield Hospital. The young lady, who weighs 8½ pounds, will be named Anne Carrington after her maternal grandmother, Mrs. William Poindexter Montague, of Middleburg. Mrs. Montague and Frank C. Littleton, jr., are staying in Washington with her cousin, Mrs. H. Rozier Dulaney, jr. Mrs. Littleton was formerly Miss Rosalie Young Montague, of Charleston, S. C., and Middleburg.

Sears-Shippen Wedding Set Next Saturday

Rites at St. Alban's To Unite D. C. Man And Philadelphia Girl

The wedding of Miss Natalie Brooks Sears and Edward Shippen will take place next Saturday at 4 p. m. in the Little Sanctuary of St. Alban's School, with Canon Albert H. Lucas officiating.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mrs. Thomas Carter, of Philadelphia, and the late Marion Simms Sears, of New York City. Mrs. Carter has leased an apartment in Georgetown for the winter. Mr. Shippen is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Lloyd Parker Shippen, of this city.

Miss Sears will have as her matron of honor and only attendant, Mrs. Charles Hooff, of Philadelphia. Her uncle, Horace Smith, of Philadelphia, will give the bride away. William B. Shippen will serve as best man for his brother. Only members of the immediate family will witness the ceremony. After November 1 the couple will live at 1636 Thirty-second street.

Miss Sears attended Agnes Irwin School in Philadelphia and was presented to society in 1937. Mr. Shippen was graduated from St. Alban's School and the University of Pennsylvania. He is a member of the University Club here.

Miss Josephs To Be Married

Mrs. Solly Josephs, of Chattanooga, Tenn., announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Martha Lillian Josephs, to Nathaniel Louis Nathanson, of Chicago, Ill.

Miss Josephs was graduated from Wellesley in the class of '35 and has since lived in New York and Washington. At present she is connected with the Advisory Commission to the Council of National Defense.

Mr. Nathanson is the son of Mrs. Lillian D. Nathanson, of New Haven, Conn. He was graduated from Yale University and its Law School. He received the degree of doctor of juristic science from Harvard University in 1933. He was secretary to the late Associate Justice Louis D. Brandeis. At present he is a member of the faculty of Northwestern University School of Law.

The wedding will take place in Washington in December.

Joerissens Return From N. C., Plan Florida Stay

Mr. and Mrs. Carl A. Joerissen, of Chevy Chase, Md., have returned to Washington after spending the summer at High Hampton Country Club in North Carolina. On December 1, with their daughter, Kay Joerissen, who has been traveling with them, they will leave for Miami Shores, Fla., to spend the rest of the winter.

Miss Kay Joerissen will entertain at dinner at the Shoreham next Saturday in honor of Miss Gertrude Robertson, of Warrenton, and John Midlen, of this city, whose marriage will take place at Warrenton later in October.

Mrs. Ranald Reid Takes Apartment At Anchorage

Mrs. Ranald Macfarlane Reid, who returned to this country from England during the summer, has taken an apartment at the Anchorage. Mrs. Reid is the wife of Air Vice Marshal Reid, in command of the British forces at Aden, and will remain here until she can join her husband.

Mrs. Reid spent the summer with her mother, Mrs. Hamilton Wright, of Washington, at the latter's summer home in New England. She is the sister of the Misses Barbara and Rosalind Wright, of this city.

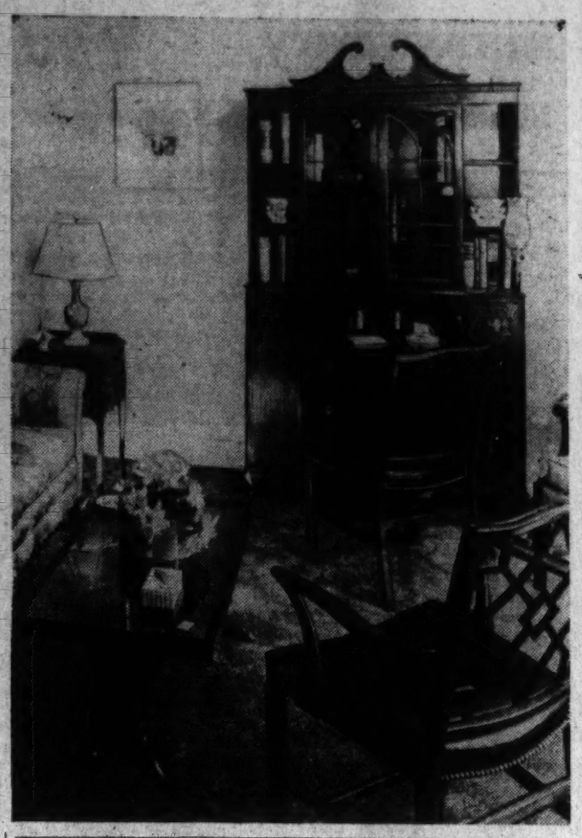
Gay Color in Home Will Rout Fall Doldrums

Here are some ways to brighten the living room for gray fall days as suggested by Mary Annette Chittick, home decoration authority. Left shows rose and green flowered chintz draperies which provide the color theme for the room. Beneath the valence is a string of fluorescent lights that lend a soft glow to entire room. The sofa upholstered in green and rose damask, a green Fole bowl filled with pink roses and axminster carpet of pine cone pattern in three tones of green, all lend striking color accents. Picture below shows French etchings of street scenes. The mahogany break-front desk has chair upholstered in green leather, finished with brass tacks. The lamp on small table is of white china, with white stretched silk shade



Furnishings as Well as Walls Today Take on Brighter Hues

By Martha Ellyn

WITH THE "melancholy days" of fall just around the corner, many a homemaker is pondering how she can make the interior of her home brighter and gayer. For the benefit of those who are not experienced in the handling of color I sought the advice of Mary Annette Chittick, home counsellor for a local department store, who helps many Washington women with their interior decoration problems.

Miss Chittick

Miss Chittick is a firm believer that color has a definite influence on our lives—for she thinks it creates beauty. In the past, she says, there have been so many colors to choose from for home furnishings that the average woman became confused—if not panicky. But all that has been changed recently by the thought that has been given to color correlation by manufacturers of home furnishings. Merchants have created their items in complete harmony in both color and design. It took the cooperation of the mills that weave the fabrics, the makers of rugs and carpets, the designers of lamps, the manufacturers of bedspreads, comforts, linens and towels, and all the other products that go to make up a pleasing effect in the home.

Seven Basic Colors Used

"Most women lack a sense of direction in decoration, and I try to help them to help themselves," says Miss Chittick. "A woman would not wear a gold hat with a blue skirt and carry a maroon bag, yet she will mix colors with great abandon and the result is a bad effect in decorating the home."

Is it not a difficult problem to instruct women shoppers in color correlation?" Miss Chittick was asked. "No," she replied, "not since we use the seven basic colors." (She has found in her work that seven basic colors are the most sought for in home decoration.) "But," she contiued, "we must remember also that these seven colors appear in countless combinations, designs and fabrics, providing unlimited possibilities as to their use. These colors are: Gooseberry Green, Old Gold, Pompadour Rose, Romantic Blue, Dregs of Wine, Honey Beige and Venetian Red.

Harmony Essential In Color Scheme

Miss Chittick has furnished a complete home with correlated merchandise. It has been called Concord House because it represents concord and harmony in the relation of all its merchandise. The living room in rose and green has a keynote that visitors are not likely to forget. It is an appropriate background for pleasant evenings and the pleasures of friendly gatherings. The room is dignified in the American manner, a combination of beauty and simplicity, yet practical enough for every day living.

In deciding the keynote of color in the living room, rose and green chintz draperies was the starting point. The drapery colors range from pale rose to deep mulberry, and from light green to gooseberry green. The material is a permanent finish print. Other furnishings were chosen to harmonize with these two predominating colors.

Fabric Washing

Add a few drops of ammonia to the water when washing delicate fabrics. Added to the water in which woolens are washed it will soften the water and keep woolens white and soft. If silk stockings are too large, soak them in water to which a little ammonia has been added and the silk will shrink.

A WOMAN'S

WASHINGTON

Caroline Ware, National Defense Assistant, Believes in Going All the Way on Program

CAROLINE WARE, assistant to the consumer adviser of the National Defense Commission, takes the phrase "total defense" literally. "I feel it means everybody and every aspect of American life," she says. "If our people are not physically fit, or live in homes that are not worth defending, the whole defense program is correspondingly weakened. Health and welfare are less dramatic than military defense, but they are equally vital." She feels the social aspects of the program provide the housewife, the mother and the school teacher with an opportunity for active participation, whether her sphere of activity be her kitchen or a classroom.

Caroline Ware

Outside the office, Miss Ware is Mrs. Gardiner Means, wife of the well known economist and collaborator with him on a number of books. She also is mistress of a farm in Vienna, Va. She loves to cook, and finds that planning and preparing a meal at the end of a hard day clears the cobwebs from her brain.

CONSISTENCY—An official order has been issued to employes of the Advisory Commission to the Council of National Defense. Henceforth, it proclaims, the word which the Government Style Manual spells "adviser" is to appear in all letters and releases with an "o" in the third syllable.

If every bed in the United States were equipped with a good mattress and adequate covering, not only would everyone sleep better but the surplus cotton problem would practically disappear. People in the know say it would take about 2,000,000 bales to do the whole job, which would involve replacing many a pile of straw. The idea is no mere fantasy. For several months farm women in 17 States have been making new mattresses for their homes under the supervision of home demonstration agents. Agriculture Adjustment Administration certifies families eligible for the project, and the Surplus Marketing Administration provides the cotton. Already 550,000 people are sleeping on good beds as a result, and the cooperative program soon is to be extended to all 48 States.

CONVERSATION PIECES—Two elegantly dressed women, apparently mother and daughter, stood at the corner of Thirteenth and F. The elder was saying vehemently to the younger, "You may have been to college, but I STILL know more about lions than you do." . . . "Nosiest neighbor I ever had," said one man to another as they walked along Ontario place northwest. "When I interviewed her for the census I asked her a thousand questions just out of spite."

A local restaurant overlooks a wooded lot which, through none of its doing, has become a dump heap attractive to unwelcome scavengers. Recently some women lunching near the window complained about the sight of rats scurrying around in the woods and demanded another table. The waitress said, quickly, "Rats? You must mean those cute baby squirrels." The customers apologized for their stupidity, and return daily to eat where they can watch the little fellows play.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man's Bride of a Year Doesn't Enjoy Being Married; She Left Once, Then Came Back; Talks of Leaving A Second Time; Should He Lay Down an Ultimatum?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: We have been married a year and, except for a few minor differences of opinion, we have got along very well—or did, until a month ago. My wife and I both work, although I have never wanted her to, because my income is sufficient for both. I would rather she stayed home, kept house and eventually raised a family.

However, she doesn't want to give up her position because she likes being independent. She likes to come and go as she pleases, without assuming the usual responsibilities of a married woman. She seems to get more pleasure from her association with girl friends than from her marriage.

A few weeks ago she left me, saying that she didn't enjoy being married. Then, realizing her mistake, she returned two days later. After that, things ran smoothly again until now, when she tells me for the second time that she wants to leave. She gives the same reason as before.

I am very much in love with her and have reason to believe that, underneath her flightiness, she loves me. I am positive there is no other man. What shall I do? Shall I let her go and wait, as I did last time, for her to come back? Or shall I tell her that if she leaves this time she cannot return? I have great confidence in your judgment and would like an immediate reply. Sincerely, W. W.

Give Her Free Rein To Find Herself

DEAR W. W.: As I see the picture, the girl got married primarily for the sake of sampling new experience; because she had (from you) an interesting offer of marriage; and because she figured getting married was the next step forward in her growing-up process. Now that the novelty has worn off the arrangement, and she has discovered that being married is vastly different from being engaged, she thinks she has made a mistake; and it looks as if she had no desire to "make the best of it." Preliminary to getting married, I suppose she hadn't the foggiest notion what kind of man would make a suitable mate for her; but now, after a year of trying to adapt to you, it appears she is fairly certain she has made a life contract with the wrong man. Wrong for her, that is.

Since you love her deeply, you would be going against the grain of your nature in forbidding her to return, if she leaves a second time. Also, you would be introducing an unnecessary element of harshness or antagonism into the already disturbed relationship. So, in order to keep friction at a minimum, and aid the situation in working itself out to the right or harmonious conclusion—my advice to you is to keep an attitude of patient, detached kindliness toward her "off again, on again" actions.

If she knows she is free to go she will be less inclined to go. And if you keep a cheerful, stiff upper lip about her going, neither asking her to return nor ordering her to stay away, she will be back once again—if she cares for you at all; and perhaps secretly worried at the possibility she has lost some ground in your affections because of her flighty behavior. It is likely that if she once got it in her head that you could live as happily without her as with her, you would never again be harassed by a display of wifely indifference. And the way to impart that suggestion is to remain serene, reserved and collected, no matter what she does.

If, after another year's magnanimous consideration, she still continues to run out on you periodically, then you might crack down on her with the ultimatum aforementioned. Because, by that time, your emotions probably would be in line with your words. No doubt you would actually rather have done with her than be kept in continuous suspense. But one short year of marriage is too little time for either of you to have found yourself completely in relation to the other.

You need the second year, at the very least, in order to get your bearings. It is possible, of course, that she may have jumped the traces completely before the end of the second year. But should that happen, you can (if you conduct yourself with patience ad tolerance) have the satisfaction of knowing you were in no way to blame. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Children Need Vitamin D for Sake of Health

"When the frost is on the pumpkin and the fodder's in the shock" is the time of the year when mothers should begin to grow vitamin D conscious.

This is because with the ringing of school bells and the coming of cold days children now spend most of their time indoors. They miss the fresh air and sunlight. Even the sunshine they do receive is only one-third as beneficial as the June sunlight. And the lack of sunlight may mean the rise of tooth decay and rickets in the winter.

"The exposure of the body to the rays of the sun," according to "Food and Life," the 1939 yearbook of agriculture, "creates some vitamin D from a substance present in the skin, but under modern conditions of living this means of providing vitamin D is not always reliable . . . In order that growing children may develop normal teeth and bones it is essential, first of all, that their diets contain liberal amounts of mineral bone-building materials—chiefly calcium and phosphorus. Vitamin D is a further essential, for it aids in the absorption of calcium and phosphorus from the food."

Calcium and phosphorus are supplied chiefly by milk. The effectiveness of vitamin D milk, according to Bulletin 447 from the Agriculture Experiment Station at Madison, Wis., lies in the fact that "vitamin D milk provides in the same product the calcium and phosphorus required for bone structure and the vitamin required for bone formation."

Maybe It's Your Manners, John!

NOT SO fast John, not so fast! Cool off your peppery temper. Of course, your money will buy just as good theater ticket's as Paul's dollars. Nobody's arguing that point with you. Then you can't understand why Mary preferred to see the new play with Paul.

All right, a few nights ago when you escorted Mary to the theater you went bounding in ahead of her, rushed into the row and left her to barge in after you. At this point Mary is very proper—especially in public—and she wanted to impress you with her knowledge and her poise. But you didn't give her a chance. Besides embarrassing her, this rudeness made her think you didn't know or care how to act in the theater.

It really isn't a matter of life and death whether you or Mary go down the aisle first. Much depends upon the circumstances. Usually Mary follows the usher and you walk a few paces back of her. If there is no usher, you go first and Mary follows you. However, if the usher takes the checks at the head of the aisle, either walk beside Mary or back of her, when the usher leads the way down the aisle. Should the usher be halfway down the aisle or near the front lead the way until you turn over the tickets. Then Mary goes directly behind the usher. In any event, you stand at the end of the row, Mary goes first, you follow and take the seat nearest the aisle.

Nevertheless, if Mary's seat is on the extreme side and she can see better by exchanging seats with you, not to do so would be inconsiderate.

Week-End Visiting Is Waterloo Of Dieters; Discretion Is Needed

By Ida Jean Kain

IT ISN'T THE day-in-day-out that gets to be an insufferable bore—it's the necessity for sticking to your diet over the week-end, when everyone else is having fun and food.

Come Saturday, you are confronted with a delicate choice. Are you going to be an on-looker, a role which brings out the martyr in you, and one which may cause your friends to regard you as eccentric? Or shall you go ahead and sow a few wild calories?

The trouble with many of you is that when you relax caution a little you feel as though you might as well go on a regular calorie binge. Don't let one dietary deviation lead to another. If you start dipping into the salted peanuts, you are headed for trouble. Nobody bothers to count peanuts, but they count 100 calories for every 20. Just half of one peanut supplies the extra calories you need to keep chatting wittily for an hour.

Reducers Can Be Bores

When invited out to dine, don't feel that you have to be conspicuous because you are trying to stay on a diet. It won't be noticed that you are leaving your roll and butter untouched. And there is no rule of etiquette that says you have to eat all the olives and finish every particle of your dessert.

One of the main rules for a pleasant week-end is not to make the table talk of your diet. The worst bore is the reducer who sits down to a delicious dinner and informs her hostess that she is on a diet! And don't be one of those "I shouldn't eat this but I am going to" people! Either eat it and say nothing—or don't and say nothing.

Just Use Discretion

It is possible to dine and diet. By holding your breakfast and luncheon calories down to 500 for the two meals, you can have 700 for dinner—and that allows for quite a lot of food without exceeding your reducing quota. But don't make the mistake of trying to go without food all day or you will be ravenous by dinner!

It is all right to sow a few wild calories over the week-end. Just use a little discretion and go back to your usual diet on Monday morning.

Senate Approves Great Falls Bridge

Bill Would Set Up Unit to Promote Span To Be Paid for by Toll

By James D. Secrest

The Senate yesterday gave its approval to a bill designed to promote a toll bridge across the Potomac River near Great Falls through the sale of bonds.

The measure, sponsored by Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, creates a Great Falls Bridge Commission, which is authorized to construct and operate the bridge, subject to approval by the Secretary of War and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. The bridge is to be within 2 miles above or below Great Falls.

The project, which must be approved by the House, was opposed by the Federal Works Agency, which declared that there are four free bridges across the Potomac River in the vicinity of Washington, and added:

"It is not apparent to the administration that a highway toll bridge at the location proposed can ever be expected to amortize its cost of construction."

Explanation by Byrd

The Senate Committee on Commerce reported the bill without recommendation after the Secretary of War and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission said they had no objections to it. The Senate passed it under unanimous consent following a brief explanation by Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia.

The commission, which is empowered to promote the project and operate the bridge, would comprise J. Edward Burroughs, jr., former counsel of the special House subcommittee which conducted the 1939 milk investigation; James Nolan and Robert Peter, of Montgomery County, and John C. Mackall and H. W. T. Eglin, of Fairfax County.

They would be entitled to $15 a day, with a yearly maximum salary of $1,200 for the members and $1,800 for the chairman, plus traveling expenses of 10 cents a mile.

The cost of construction is not specified in the legislation, but the commission is directed to set up a sinking fund for the amortization of the bonds and to fix toll charges designed to pay off the debt.

Delano's Proposals Out

Although a letter from Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the Park and Planning Commission, recommending a half dozen specific amendments to the bill was made a part of the committee report, none of the amendments have been written into the bill.

One of Delano's proposals was that, after the debt has been paid, the bridge be turned over to the United States to form a link in the George Washington Memorial highway rather than be turned over jointly to the States of Maryland and Virginia.

After some discussion, the Senate postponed a vote on a bill directing the Secretary of the Interior to acquire the abandoned Adolf Gobel abattoir at the intersection of Benning road and Minnesota avenue northeast.

Objection by Austin

Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, raised an objection after saying that he had made a personal inspection of the property. Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, read a letter from Secretary Ickes asking that the legislation be passed as speedily as possible.

Ickes and park officials were responsible for stopping he Gobel company from reopening the slaughter house in 1934 on the ground that it was too close to a low-cost Government housing project.

The bill would permit the Government to expend as much as $500,000 for the property, although an Interior Department report states that its assessed value is $134,127.

Paving Workers Vote to Bargain Through C. I. O.

By a vote of 471 to 185, employes of eight paving-construction companies last night made the C. I. O. their bargaining agent. The move affects "over 90 per cent" of the Washington paving industry, C. I. O. officials said.

Companies affected are Corson & Gruman, Wilmoth Paving, McGuire & Rolfe, Donaldson Paving, W. F. Brenizer, E. B. Donaldson & Bro., C. S. Faller and the Union Paving Co.

Voting was conducted under the auspices of the National Labor Relations Board at 1811 Seventh street northwest. There were 24 votes challenged in the group of 680 voicing decisions.

Organiaztion work for the C. I. O. was carried out by Thomas P. McTigue, chairman of the Construction Workers District Conference of the C. I. O.

D. C. Red Cross Roll Call Tops 1939 Figures

Total Membership Now 6,619; Utilities Show Heavy Return

Workers for the Red Cross Roll Call yesterday pushed the District's membership drive slightly ahead of results for the similar period of the 1939 drive, recovering Thursday's losses, officials said last night.

Total membership of the 1940 campaign to date is 6,619 as compared to 6,449 last year. Heavy returns by the utilities group drove that division of the Roll Call 600 per cent ahead of 1939.

Government units remained in the lead with 3,408 enrollments, followed by General Business with 875, and Booths with 619. Employes of the Kal Advertising Co. reported 100 per cent enrollment as did those in the office of the District Coroner.

At 9 a. m. today Charles E. Smoot, vice chairman of the Roll Call's Speakers Bureau, will address the employes of Woodward & Lothrop. On the student assembly program broadcast over Station WOL at 7:45 p. m. today representatives of the Junior Red Cross will be heard.

Other Roll Call broadcasts today will be at 5:30 p. m. on Station WOL when Mrs. Fanny B. Ingram will speak, and at 10:15 p. m. when William F. Baker will be heard on the "Labor News Review" on Station WJSV.

Donald F. Larson, vice chairman of the financial committee, will be interviewed by Gordon Hittenmark this morning in his regular broadcast over Station WRC.

Naval Academy Centennial Bill Passes Senate

By the Associated Press

A commission to make plans for commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Naval Academy in 1945 would be created under a bill (SJR 253) passed by the Senate yesterday and sent to the House.

The measure provides that the commission include three Senators, three members of the House, the President, the Speaker of the House, the Governor of Maryland, Secretary of the Navy, superintendent of the Naval Academy and five persons to be appointed by the President.

It directs that the celebration be held "on or about October 10, 1945," and called for cooperation with the State of Maryland, the City of Annapolis, the Navy Athletic Association and other organizations in completing the plans.

Members of the commission would serve without compensation.

Securities Tax Suits Filed

Four suits against county taxpayers for failure to pay securities taxes in 1937, 1938 and 1939 have been filed in Montgomery County Circuit Court by John B. Diamond, county treasurer, through Attorney David R. Betts, counsel to the treasurer.

The suits ask the court to enter judgments. Betts said he has collected approximately 90 per cent of the outstanding unpaid taxes on securities since he started his drive in June.

Bishop Leonard To Address Rally

Bishop Adna Wright Leonard, new Methodist resident prelate, will address the "Methodist Day" gathering today at 2 p. m. at the Strawbridge Home for Boys, Sykesville, Md.

Members of the Baltimore Conference, comprising Washington, Baltimore and most of Maryland west of the Chesapeake Bay, will be on hand for the "day," following an annual custom of the former Methodist Episcopal Church, of which the home was a part before Methodist unification.

Flower Show Honors Taken By D.C. Couple

Mr. and Mrs. Graff Win Sweepstakes At Takoma Park

Mr. and Mrs. George U. Graff, 242 Peabody street northwest, won the sweepstakes at the twenty-third annual dahlia and fall flower show of the Takoma Horticultural Club, which opened last night at the Takoma Park, D. C., Elementary School, Piney Branch road and Aspen street.

Winning the best flower in the show with a blended pink "Greater Glory" in the semicactus class, they also took 19 blue ribbons in the dahlia, special arrangements and miniature classes. Their prize-winning flower measured 14 inches in diameter. They also carried red ribbons in seven other classes and two thirds.

A yellow "Lord of Autumn" about 10 inches in width, exhibited by John L. Bishop, 1512 Lawrence street northeast, was judged the second-best flower in the show. Bishop carried off three blue ribbons in the dahlia collection of 25 varieties, the dahlia specimen, cactus class, and the informal decorative type. He won five seconds, one third, in other classes.

E. R. Phillips, 807 Philadelphia avenue, Takoma Park, Md., was the winner of the third best dahlia with his exhibit of a white "American Purity."

Sixteen ribbons went to Mrs. Eva Ross, Falls Church, Va., who took five blues, five reds and 6 whites in the dahlia special arrangements and miniatures groups.

Mrs. Graff was also awarded a hand beaten pewter vase, donated by Mrs. Fulton Lewis, for being the sweepstakes' winner.

Originating the flower "Ivory Gem," an orchid type dahlia from a seedling in her garden four years ago, Mrs. Theodore Ruhoff, 401 Carroll avenue, Takoma Park, Md., won the bronze medal for the "House Beautiful Futurity."

The show will be open to the public today from 9 a. m. until 9 p. m. William H. Parsons is chairman.

Other winners are: J. L. Bowling, W. H. Gannaway, Edwin C. Powell, C. E. Senseman, L. B. Dodge, Frank S. Pohanka, Mrs. Oliver E. Sweet, Raymond Crowley, H. J. Hosmer, Roy Magruder, Teddy Ruhoff, Harold Howser, H. L. Knight, Mrs. A. K. Goodman, Miss Mae Simpson, Mrs. M. K. Bartlett, Mrs. M. J. Murray, Mrs. R. F. Gray and C. H. McLendon.

U. S. Shewmaker and James H. Kesecker judged the dahlias while the arrangements and other flowers were judged by Mrs. Mary S. Porter and Dr. Roy Magruder.

Highway Land Purchase Plan Invalidated

Commission Sets Aside Agreement to Buy Railroad Right-of-Way

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Sept. 27.—State Roads Commission Chairman Ezra B. Whitman announced today that the commission had invalidated an agreement, made by a previous commission, to purchase the old W. B. & A. Railroad right of way for a new Baltimore-Washington highway.

Whitman indicated the commission would institute condemnation proceedings for 7 miles of right of way adjacent to Washington, but the entire plan for the proposed highway would be changed.

The previous commission, headed by J. Glenn Beall, had agreed to purchase the abandoned railroad right of way—approximately 40 miles—for $80,000. The agreement, however, was contingent on the approval of the attorney general, and this never was received, Whitman said.

The commission chairman said "we would have had this road built by now but for the difficulties with the 33 miles we didn't want" and declared the commission hoped to have all right-of-way problems settled by spring.

The present proposed route would utilize Federal property in the vicinity of Greenbelt, Beltsville and Fort Meade, making it possible for the highway to be projected within 9 miles of Baltimore before private property would have to be acquired for right of way.

The 7 miles of W. B. & A. right of way would be acquired as a local project, Whitman said, to provide another entrance into the Capital.

Whitman said the commission had decided to invalidate the agreement because study of the right of way indicated that large sections of it were never owned in fee simple by the railway, but apparently had reverted to the original owners upon abandonment of rail service.

Had the agreement gone through, Whitman maintained, it would have been necessary to deal again with persons with "reversionary rights."

Disney Aide to Sketch For Children Today

Normand Dulin, of the Walt Disney Studios, will sketch some of Disney's more famous movie characters for children in the gallery of the National Art School, 1503 Twenty-first street northwest, today at 10 a. m. Any child interested in animated art is invited, with no charge for admission.

G. U., Oldest Jesuit School, Marks Order's Anniversary

Georgetown University, oldest Jesuit school in the country, yesterday marked the 400th anniversary of the founding of the Society of Jesus, praised by the Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., as "an instrument against Godlessness."

The university head spoke at convocation exercises in Gaston Hall, to which members of the student body, alumni and the school's religious community came after solemn high mass in Holy Trinity Church, sung by three alumni. They were the Rev. Edward H. Roach, A. B., '16, pastor of the Church of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, Thurmont, Md., celebrant; the Rev. Christopher T. Clark, A. B., '27, of Newark, N. J., deacon, and the Rev. Henry V. Vier, A. B., '35, of New York City, subdeacon.

Father O'Leary, in his address, reminded that the Society of Jesus is not only an instrument against godlessness and ignorance, but also "against the powers which would wreck our republic and place as a gloating monument over its grave a mockery of government in defiance to God, the Supreme Lawgiver."

Father O'Leary said the tiny seed planted 400 years ago yesterday, when Pope Paul III gave official approbation to the document drawn up by St. Ignatius Loyola establishing a new religious order in the church "has flowered into a tree of far-flung Catholic activities." There are in the United States at present, he said, 14 flourishing Jesuit universities, ten colleges and 38 high schools with an attendance of 65,000 students. In the American division of the order, he said, are nearly 5,000 priests, scholastics and brothers.

Awards were presented to the following undergraduates at the convocation:

John H. Coleman, '43, New York, the White Debating Medal; Edward J. Keenan, '41, New York, the Garvan Oratorical Medal and the Kidwell Medal in Junior Physics; Robert B. Neu, '42, Virginia, the Dahlgren Medal in Calculus, and Alvin J. Cummins, '41, Maryland, the O'Brien Medal in Junior Philosophy.

The dean's honor list, for achieving the grade of "A" in all subjects in the junior class, included John F. Beail, District of Columbia; George A. Christy, District of Columbia; Louis A. Cross, jr., Maryland; Joseph L. Eckenrode, Pennsylvania; Edward J. Keenan, New York; Thomas A. Rover, District of Columbia; Irving F. Rizzi, New Jersey, and Paul A. Vermylen, New York.

Sophomore honors: Robert P. Hoss, Massachusetts; Leon A. LeBuffe, District of Columbia; Robert B. Neu, Virginia; Andrew J. Rankoff, New York.

Freshman honors: Edward J. Callahan, Minnesota, and Charles M. Daly, jr., Connecticut.

First Get-Together Of Fall All Gayety; Business Is Left To Committeemen

More than 200 members and guests of the Burroughs Citizens Association last night participated in the association's first meeting of the year and enjoyed themselves without giving a thought to serious civic affairs.

Inaugurating the new policy of the unit's president, Dr. A. F. Heath, the meeting was devoted entirely to entertainment by children in the Langdon-Taft playground area and singing, preceeded by a talk on "Friendship" by the the Rev. M. C. Sloth, pastor of the Brookland Baptist Church.

No business was discussed, that being handled this year largely by committees and special meetings of "Key Men," President Heath said. Policy and resolutions will be presented to the group as a whole, but most of the meetings this season will feature entertainment, he added.

Dance Hawaiian Style

Highlighting last night's entertainment program were solos by Helen Finch, Robert Lane, Patsy Spittle and Peggy Keyser; a recitation by 5-year-old Margaret Jane Curling, an accordion solo by 8-year-old Bernard Costello, and Hawaiian dances by Kathleen Matters, Mary Claire Wagner, Vivian Nicholson, Jean Gill, Doris Trimmer and Dorothy Spangler.

Announced at the meeting was the appointment of Wilbur S. Finch and Phillip U. Gayout as delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

At the same time, the Anacostia Citizens Association met in the Anacostia High School. A nominating committee was appointed for next month's election, a progress report was heard from the committee preparing the John Phillip Sousa Bridge opening ceremonies and local business was discussed.

Oppose Zoning Change

A committee was appointed to oppose changes in the residential zoning of a portion of Eighteenth street to permit erection of an apartment house there. Three new members were voted into the unit.

A letter was sent to Maj. Ernest W. Brown, head of the District police force, by the Friendship Citizens Association yesterday suggesting that he close Murdock Mill road from Forty-second to Forty-fourth street and detail two policemen in that area to overcome the traffic problem created by construction work at Albemarle, Murdock Mill and River roads and Wisconsin avenue.

President Samuel J. Flickinger urged an increase in the police force in that area especially during periods when school children are abroad.

Byrd Honored By Roosevelt With Gold Star

By the Associated Press

Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd stripped several medals from his uniform yesterday, slipped them into his pocket and then received from President Roosevelt a Gold Star in recognition of the successes of his Antarctic expedition.

Already the recipient of all the medals the Government can bestow, the 51-year-old explorer and aviator was given the Gold Star in the executive offices of the White House to be attached to the Distinguished Service Medal received for his transatlantic flight in 1927.

In awarding the Gold Star, President Roosevelt said Byrd's leadership of the United States Antarctic service "has been a credit to the Government of the United States."

Fairfax Methodist Circuit Boundary To Be Changed

Boundary changes affecting the present setup of the Fairfax (Va.) Methodist Circuit will be made by Bishop W. W. Peele at the Virginia Methodist Conference at Roanoke from October 15 to 21.

For 24 years the circuit, of which the Rev. Carl Maxwell has been pastor since 1936, has comprised congregations at Fairfax, Pender, Andrew Chapel and Centerville.

Mr. Maxwell, who said yesterday that he was not yet certain regarding the full nature of the circuit changes, will preach tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Centerville, where the final union service of the four churches will take place.

The clergyman has been conducting worship services at Andrew Chapel at 11 a. m. on the first and third Sundays; at Fairfax every Sunday at 11 a. m.; Pender, on second and fourth Sundays, and Centerville each Sunday at 3 p. m.

Guard at Camp Denied Idle Pay

Members of the District National Guard while on duty during the three-week summer encampment are not entitled to benefit payments from the Unemployment Compensation Board, Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal ruled yesterday.

Seal held that although some of the Guard members were unemployed before they entered the camp and should be entitled to benefit payments, they may not draw checks from the D. U. C. Board, because they received remuneration from the Government during their stay at camp.

Marcy Morgan Crowned Queen Of President's Cup Regatta

REGAL REGATTA QUEEN—Lots of crowns have proved to be a bother in the last few months. Not so this one. Pretty Marcy Morgan will use it to good advantage as Queen of the President's Cup Regatta. Commissioner Hazen crowned her last night

Sails Across Potomac in Chilly Breeze In Float Crowded With Officials, Diplomats; Cheered as She Commands Fair Skies

Armed with a smile as bright as her blond curls, an 18-year-old beauty sailed across a twinkling Potomac last night to conquer Hains Point and 3,500 regatta enthusiasts without a struggle.

Miss Marcy Morgan was crowned 1940 Queen of the President's Cup Regatta by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen on a float crowded with Army, Navy and Marine officers, diplomats, civic leaders and racing officials overcoated against a chill 51 degrees.

Like a water goddess of mythology, smiling Marcy launched her invasion on water—but on water where the Nation's most modern speedboats will thunder today.

From her flagship, the Coast Guard cutter Calypso, itself a mass of light from rigging to gunwales, she jumped into a tiny dinghy to take command of a flare-lit fleet of small craft. From shore the official regatta starting gun boomed a salute.

Their flares casting red paths across the dark water, the fleet moved shoreward. As her boat touched the float the young queen leaped to the platform and hurried up a gangplank to the riverside scene of her coronation.

Awaiting her were Commissioner Hazen, John Remon, vice president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. and local civic leader, and Col. Harvey Miller, commander of the Fifth Marine Reserve Battalion.

"You honor us, Mr. Commissioner," smiled Queen Marcy as Hazen placed the wreath on her head as photographers' bulbs flashed.

"Let there be fair skies and calm water tomorrow," she commanded, as the crowd that had braved the chilly night for the ceremony roared its approval.

Spread fanwise behind Miss Morgan, who is the daughter of Thomas P. Morgan, jr., vice general chairman of the Regatta, and a great granddaughter of Thomas P. Morgan, early District commissioner, was a court of 10 comely princesses, representatives of official, diplomatic and residential circles.

They were Miss Jane Davis, Miss Erma Castillo Najera, Miss Marion Norris, Miss Marie Theresa Norris, Miss Nancy Strong, Miss Jean Waggaman, Miss Mary Ann Ferrandou, Miss Caroline Wadden and Miss Margery Souby and Miss Patsy Brewer.

Lieut. Comdr. J. L. Phares, U. S. N., was the queen's escort, and the following officers accompanied the court: Lieut. Chester Hammond, U. S. A.; Lieut. J. H. Skinner, U. S. A.; Lieut. E. W. Williams, U. S. A.; Lieut. F. W. Norris, U. S. A.; Lieut. J. W. Gorn, U. S. A.; Lieut. George A. Lange, U. S. N.; Capt. William B. Saunders, U. S. M. C.; Lieut. William Outerson, U. S. N.; Ensign C. C. Morgan, U. S. C. G., and Ensign B. F. Engle, U. S. C. G.

After the ceremony, an exhibition of water skiing was given by three athletes who went through a series of acrobatics despite their fractious, speeding mounts. Fireworks burst across the sky in the evening's finale.

Barrel of Cider (Hard) Causes Lorton 'Incident'

A barrel of apple juice which was set up three years ago at Lorton Reformatory to turn to vinegar, but didn't, caused a little commotion this week, it was revealed by Supt. Ray L. Huff.

The reformatory chief said the barrel of vinegar (which was really hard cider) was brought into the kitchen for use. An inmate discovered its contents and stole a quart of it. It was discovered in his locker, according to Huff, and the man placed in a detention cell for discipline.

Mount Vernon Church Plans Entertainments

The congregation of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church tonight at 8 p. m. will begin a series of indoor neighborhood entertainments in the lower church auditorium at Ninth and Massachusetts avenue northwest. The A. B. Pugh class has been sponsoring outdoor programs during the summer.

Mrs. Roy North, wife of the Third Assistant Postmaster General, will render violin numbers and Mrs. Lillie B. Garrett and Mrs. Irma Crays will sing. The program will be directed by Harry H. McMains.

Meters Bring in Nickels Already

Alexandria's parking meter system, scheduled to go into effect Monday, began netting the city revenue yesterday as motorists deposited coins in the timing devices, apparently unaware of the fact that the meter ordinance will not be effective until installation work in the downtown business area is completed.

Meters were placed along the entire south side of King street on Thursday by the Jones Parking Meter Co., of Oklahoma City, Okla., but only 36 of the 130 meters required to equip the north side of the main business street have been installed to date. Until all meters are installed and in working order, City Manager Carl Budwesky said, police will not enforce the ordinance.

The parking meters are to be placed on trial for six months under the new ordinance and the city council will be asked to decide whether to retain them permanently at the end of that period.

U. S. Group Urges Merit Bill Passage

Census Employes Rally to Plan Lobby Favoring Mead Amendment

More than 200 members of the Census Bureau gathered at the Commerce Department Auditorium last night to discuss lobbying means for House passage of the Mead amendment to the Ramspeck bill, furthering the Federal merit system.

The Mead amendment, giving permanent status to temporary Census employes as part of the Ramspeck bill passed the Senate Thursday. It is now awaiting action of a joint House-Senate committee.

Robert Sherman, president of Local Commerce 23 of the United Federal Workers of America and chairman of last night's meeting, urged those present to write friends requesting them to wire their Congressmen for passage of the bill. Petitions were circulated at the gathering.

Demanding that "the Ramspeck bill be reported out of committee with the Mead amendment a part of it," the group went on record in favor of changing the effective date of the bill from April 15, 1941, to January 15.

Passage of the Ramspeck bill giving the President authority to bring 200,000 Federal employes into the merit system was hailed yesterday by Samuel H. Ordway, jr., former civil service commissioner, Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, and Jacob Baker, president of the CIO's United Federal Workers, also commended the bill's passage.

Ordway, president of the National Civil Service Reform League, declared that "no one should be fooled by the cry that 'deserving politicians will be covered in.'"

"The Civil Service Commission has done, and will do, an honest job of weeding out incompetents," he said. "We are on the road to a real career service in America."

Praising the Senate on its action, Steward said "it will have the effect of stimulating the movement for civil service extension and for betterments in personnel administration in the whole governmental structure in this country—State, county and municipal."

Two Bicyclists, Skater Hurt In D. C. Traffic

Two youthful bicyclists and a skater were injured by automobiles on Washington streets yesterday.

William Laney, colored, 19, of 1813 Columbia road northwest, suffered a skull fracture and lacerations of the head when he was hurled from his bicycle in the 1900 block of R street northwest. Police said the automobile was operated by Edward P. Rowe, 42, of 917 G place northwest.

Struck by an automobile while skating at Fourth and R streets northwest, James E. Herndon, colored, 14, of 402 Florida avenue northwest, lost his left eye. Police said Albert Dotson, 48, of 1023 Sixth street northwest, was driving the machine.

Rudolph Curry, colored, 14, of 1317 Corcoran street northwest, suffered a fractured right arm and head injuries when he was struck by an automobile while riding his bicycle at Tenth and P streets northwest. The automobile, police reported, was operated by George T. Halloway, colored, 19, of 2716 Sherman avenue northwest.

Bessie W. Cook, colored, 47, of 1717 Fourth street northwest, was injured when she was struck by an automobile at Fourteenth and P streets northwest. Police said the automobile was driven by Donald T. Lowery, 23, of 1657 Hobart place northwest.

Naval R. O. T. C. At U. of Va. To Train on Land

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 27.—Because the Rivanna River offers only limited possibilities, the 75 University of Virginia students who have applied to take the course in the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps School will have to do all of their local training on land.

Commander L. E. Kelly, in charge of the corps stationed here, said today that the Navy has been forced to cancel an order for a 30-foot whaleboat which was to have been sent here for training purposes.

Some 60 years ago the Rivanna River was used by the University Boat Club.

The university faculty will meet soon to decide on the credits to be given for the four-year course.

Glenn Miller and Band, at the Earle, Show Why They Are at Radio's Peak

Maureen O'Sullivan, Robert Young in 'Sporting Blood,' Virginia Horse Film

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell

"SPORTING BLOOD." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of an original story by Grace Norton, adapted to the screen by Lawrence Hazard, Albert Mannheimer and Dorothy Yost, costarring Robert Young, Maureen O'Sullivan and Lewis Stone, with William Gargan, Lynne Carver, Clarence Muse, Lloyd Corrigan, George H. Reed, Tom Kennedy, Russell Hicks and George Lessey. Directed by S. Sylvan Simon. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Earle Theater.

It's easy to see why Glenn Miller and his band stand at the top of today's radio heap. As in the case of Mickey Rooney, the boys at the Earle are just plain good at what they do. Though their orchestra looks brassy at first sight, it's smooth as milk and honey; though its reputation is colossal in a profession where everything's gargantuan, there's an easy abandon about the group which makes it smartly entertaining.

On the Earle screen is a film of the neighboring Virginia horse country, "Sporting Blood," an M-G-M release that's no great shakes at original story-telling but which this reviewer enjoyed perhaps because he likes any film about horses. It's a purely personal preference, of course, and maybe you don't care for horses and racing any more than you do for stories of family feuds; in which case, let Glenn Miller be your single dish.

For with the 52-minute program the quarter-hour favorite offers, it's a richly entertaining dish. The band is knowing and professional, quite at home in a theater as it is on the air waves. Besides its accustomed vocalists, Marion Hutton and Ray Eberle, the band plays for its own enjoyment and for Roy Davis' novelty turn and the unbeatable Berry Brothers.

What does the group play, you Miller fans want to know? Well, of course, their theme comes first, after which they set to with "In the Mood" and "Sunrise Serenade." They play "Sweet and Lovely," "Tuxedo Junction" and "Ole Black Joe." Ray Eberle, whose breath control is somethign to envy, sings "The Nearness of You" and "I'll Never Smile Again."

Finally vivacious, blonde, blue-gowned Marion Hutton swings on with an elegant version of "Boog It," as tingling a rendition of this modern classic as ever we've heard. She's a fascinating songstress to watch, too, and you'll like her "Rhumba Jump," Yummie.

That skillful trio of ebony, grace and rhythm, the Berry brothers, are new to the Miller aggregation, but they're slickly dipsy as their white ties, tailcoats and yellow canes. And Roy Davis fills his spot neatly.

A pack of the credit for this smooth-running stage bill should go to Producer Harry Anger. You might have an idea that the whole stage bill this week has been traveling as a unit. But it isn't. What makes you think it is the assured Anger staging, the novel lighting effects and the lack of extraneous detail which keeps up the pace. This smart staging has a lot to do with the dance band's theater success.

"Sporting Blood" is that traditional story of the young man who returns to his home county after a family scandal that rocked the neighbors of a generation ago. Robert Young is the chap. He's spent most of his years at the Nation's tracks, horse country blood in his veins, trying to win with his entries and to pick up what he could by kindly suggestions to embryo betters. Family arch-enemy is Lewis Stone, whose wife ran away with Young's father all those years ago. Daughters Lynne Carver and O'Sullivan, are both fond of the interloper; the first relationship is reciprocated, the second is not until our hero finally wakes up.

But as we've admitted, you know the story well enough to have written it yourself. Still, had you written it yourself and were, as the old song used to put it, "Crazy Over Horses," you'd be pretty well pleased with the thing. There are colts to be born, habits to be broken if the great race is to be won and there are the eternally-thrilling races to be run. No sir.

The players are likeable enough. Young and Stone and Miss O'Sullivan do what's expected of them, though we'll wonder for a time whatever happened to luscious Lynne Carver after she eloped to Washington. Miss Carver is, in a word, eyesplitting as the sister who knew what she wanted. S. Sylvan Simon's direction has its interesting as well as its obvious touches.

The Miller band, by the way, will offer a late show this evening, going on for the last time at 11:30 p. m. Last complete bill begins at 10 o'clock.

Little

"Masquerade In Vienna," one of the last films to come from Vienna B. H. (Before Hitler), has been added to the bill at the Little. Continuing on the Ninth street screen is "The Lady Vanishes," the Alfred Hitchcock thriller of several years ago.

It was from "Masquerade In Vienna" that the William Powell-Luise Rainer film "Escapade" was adapted and went on to win Academy awards. The Little frankly admits that its print is none too perfect, it being the last one available, but as gladly explains that since its three-day run in last winter's Film Festival, its first local engagement, patrons have been requesting a view of it. Hence the addition to the bill.

When it was played here for the first time it was observed that "Masquerade In Vienna" was an even better film than the picture which sprang from it. Spoken with the elegance which made German one of the world's cultured tongues, the story tells of an intrigue in Viennese society that sprang from "Who posed for Artist W's slightly embarrassing illustration?"

In Film of Virginia Horse Country

MAUREEN O'SULLIVAN AND ROBERT YOUNG
In the leading biped roles of the Earle's new picture of breeding and tradition, "Sporting Blood." Lewis Stone, William Gargan and Lynne Carver are prominently cast in this feature which shares Thirteenth street honors with Glenn Miller's Orchestra

The 'Met's' 'Lady in Question' Is Novel, Pleasing Comedy

"THE LADY IN QUESTION." Columbia picturization of a story by Marcel Achard, released as a film in this country under the title "Heart of Paris," adapted to the screen by Lewis Meltzer, starring Brian Aherne with Rita Hayworth, Glenn Ford, Irene Rich, George Colouris, Evelyn Keyes, Edward Norris, Curt Bois, Frank Reicher, Sumner Getchell and Nicholas Bela. Directed by Charles Vidor. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Metropolitan Theater.

"Here's a state of things!" that exclamation of harassed Koko in "The Mikado," applies to every minute of "The Lady in Question," the amiable but exciting comedy now decorating the Metropolitan Theater.

It's the blundering goodheartedness of Andre Morestan, petit bourgeois proprietor of a Paris bicycle shop, that creates all the trouble. Andre is called for jury duty, is so convinced of the innocence of a young lady accused of murder that he bullies and persuades the rest of the jurors into an acquittal verdict.

On top of this, he softly offers the young lady help if she needs it. The mademoiselle does need help. It takes the form of a job in Andre's shop. All this is absolutely innocent, we'll have you understand. But it involves Andre in endless lies to his wife and family. His son recognizes the girl, Natalie, as the femme fatale in the cause celebre. His wife, too, is sure there's something phony about the new bicycle saleslady, though she can't put her finger on it. Then a fellow juror drops in and Natalie has to be rushed into the stock-room to prevent her recognition. At this juncture, Andre's son would be hanging around and jump to the conclusion that papa's conducting an amour with the help. It's maddening.

Affairs proceed from worse to terrible. With the unpredictability of the male sex, Andre's son falls head over heels in love with the girl of whom he thinks his father is enamored. Andre's prospective son-in-law makes passes at the cursedly beautiful Natalie. With his daughter's engagement broken, his son defying him, the bedeviled Andre decides that Natalie is a jinx, winds up his charitable efforts with a full confession.

In its original version "The Lady In Question" was "Heart of Paris," a French production with more than a touch of morbidity, sadness and frustration. In the hands of Hollywood, the excellent story has been purged of tears, made into a delightful comedy of the petit bourgeoisie and without sacrifice of realism.

Brian Aherne plays Andre with a kindliness, humor and skill that definitely takes him away from the romantic leading man roles that have often wasted his talents. The balance of the cast is fine, too, especially Irene Rich as Andre's wife, Glenn Ford as his son and Evelyn Keyes as his daughter. Various Parisian character parts are played richly by George Colouris, Edward Norris, Curt Bois and Frank Reicher.

Pleasant and diverting shorts fill out the Metropolitan diversion. Leon Errol capers ingratiatingly in "He Asked For It," a comedy of traffic tickets. The color cartoon, "Stage Fright," shows the fabulous adventures of two dogs, a trained seal and a pugilistic chicken. The news reel, thanks be, is almost devoid of windy politics, studded handsomely with shots of the American Legion having fun in Boston, Western rodeo tumbles and Eastern polo.

RKO-Keith's

In tune with a time which would rather laugh than think during its entertainment, "Hired Wife" continues for a second week at RKO-Keith's. This Rosalind Russell-Brian Aherne-Virginia Bruce film is the latest of the breathless-marital comedies to arrive in Washington.

"Hired Wife" tells of the secretary who got her boss. To be sure he married her as a business venture, but she married him because she loved him. To do it she had to be pretty ruthless with the other woman, a knowing blonde quite able to take care of herself, thank you.

The comedy hinges on three pegs: the business deal that brings it all about, the lackadaisical manner of Actor-Critic Robert Benchley and the comic gifts of Miss Russell. Need you be told that the last of these three is the greatest? The offhand, smart Miss Russell gives a natty turn to many lines that are not so funny as she makes them sound.

Also continuing at RKO-Keith's is "On Foreign Newsfronts," the latest "March of Time" 20-minuter, a resume of the war so far as seen from the viewpoint of the foreign correspondents.

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Sept. 27.

"The Westerner" proves all over again that when Sam Goldwyn gets a director like Willie Wyler and a cast headed by Gary Cooper and Walter Brennan, and leaves them alone to work out their own story, he's got a picture that's by way of being a wow. It has a strong taste of sagebrush, lots of melodrama, and best of all, it moves before it talks. Walter Brennan's screen version of "Judge" Bean gives Gary Cooper the strongest competition he's ever faced, but they fit together like a hand going into a glove. Sam's right—if we can get enough pictures like "The Westerner," we won't need double features.

HOPPER

Billie Burke's got the wish of every grandmother—the sole custody of her 6-month-old grandchild, because Pat and Bill Stephenson are vacationing on a Nevada ranch. Billie's in charge, but with a warning not to spoil the baby or in any way hamper its daily routine.

When Paulette Goddard and Joan Blondell were called for still pictures at Paramount the other day, there was no Dotty Ponedel, make-up genius, to do their faces, because Dotty's no longer at that studio. So there were no portraits made.

When Vera Vague lunched at Metro the other day, she was the center of all eyes, and nobody was more delighted than Vera when the head of the commissary asked Miss Vague if she'd step into the kitchen and let the workers see her. They wanted to know if her face matched her voice.

The talk of the town after Charlot's Revue opening was the amazing necklace worn by Paulette Goddard, which boasted 150 karats of blue and yellow sapphires. Paulette wore a gown to match, with bachelor buttons and yellow daisies woven into her dark hair.

Greer Garson's next picture is based on a story which was discovered when Writer Ralph Wheelwright was looking for a baby to adopt. He found the baby and the story in Texas. Greer plays the part of a woman who went down there to start an orphanage. Now I believe that woman heads the Welfare Department of the whole State. It's a fascinating yarn, and should do a lot for our red-head. I do wish they'd make Greer's picture in color.

You can criticize some movie folk, but you'd better not let me hear anything nasty about George Murphy. Two of his ranch hands joined Uncle Sam's forces and came to say good-by to George. And what do you think he's doing? Giving them their full pay for the year they'll be training. Added to that, he took eight cowboys who couldn't get jobs, and put them on a profit-sharing basis at his ranch.

Jack Oakie has done much to reduce, but while doing scenes for "Tin Pan Alley," he started to melt away at the rate of six pounds a day. He was wearing a coonskin coat, leather-lined, in the bright sunshine. The third day, when he paused to rest the coat, an ice-cream man came along with a suggestion—so wrapped some dry ice in tinfoil, placed it in the inside pockets of the coat, and Oakie was cool as a cucumber.

When Connie Moore's brother, Joe, came over to Texas to watch them shooting "I Wanted Wings," he was so impressed with the cadets that he joined the air force.

Gene Autry was explaining the merits of a Palomino as a saddle horse to Ann Miller when Jimmy Durante butted in to say that a thoroughbred was much better to ride.

"Are you a good judge of horseflesh?" said Gene. "I dunno," retorted Jimmy, "I never ate none."

Columbia

After three weeks at the Palace, "Boom Town" has moved down F street to the Columbia, a matter not entirely unexpected. Why? Well, Spencer Tracy, Clark Gable, Claudette Colbert, Hedy Lamarr and Frank Morgan are the stars.

But every schoolboy seems to know that, as well as the fact that its story concerns happenings in the Midwestern oil sectors, the adventures of the men who drive the wells and the lives of the women in their hearts. All in all, it's a jam-packed action yarn, two hours long and cut to fit its exceptional cast.

Little

"Masquerade In Vienna," one of the last films to come from Vienna B. H. (Before Hitler), has been added to the bill at the Little. Continuing on the Ninth street screen is "The Lady Vanishes," the Alfred Hitchcock thriller of several years ago.

It was from "Masquerade In Vienna" that the William Powell-Luise Rainer film "Escapade" was adapted and went on to win Academy awards. The Little frankly admits that its print is none too perfect, it being the last one available, but as gladly explains that since its three-day run in last winter's Film Festival, its first local engagement, patrons have been requesting a view of it. Hence the addition to the bill.

When it was played here for the first time it was observed that "Masquerade In Vienna" was an even better film than the picture which sprang from it. Spoken with the elegance which made German one of the world's cultured tongues, the story tells of an intrigue in Viennese society that sprang from "Who posed for Artist W's slightly embarrassing illustration?"

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Sept. 27 (INS).—In spite of the flooded market the series pictures keep coming on. Universal is going to spend $1,000,000 to make what they are calling the most pretentious serial ever put on the screen. It's a Western thriller broken up in episodes to be called "Riders of Death Valley" with the hard ridin', gun totin' cast of Dick Foran, Leo Carrillo, Buck Jones, Charles Bickford and Noah Beery, jr.

PARSONS

Recently I heard an interesting argument about these chapter pictures. In spite of the success of the "Judge Hardys," "Thin Man," "Dr. Christian" and "Dr. Kildares" many Hollywood experts feel the serials have lost some of their punch at the box-office. I agree that the latest "Nick Carter" starring Walter Pidgeon won't do him much good, for it is a very weak picture for Walter, who is so popular now. There are reports that Lew Ayres is kicking up his heels about making any more "Dr. Kildares," but he shouldn't for these "Kildares" brought him back into fame.

Republic for the first time in its history has added a shorts department which Harriet Parsons will head. I won't tell what I think of Harriet's ability because I might be accused of being partial, but if you don't tell I said so, I'll whisper I think she'll do a terrific job. She was with Columbia five years and her shorts were excellent. Her job at Republic gives her a much better chance, for she'll write, produce and direct—and narrate. She will make "Hollywood Highlights," 12 a year and her first release is November 15. Robert Tobey, her cameraman and able assistant for so long, will again be associated with her. Republic, under the able guidance of Herbert Yates, has made the most amazing strides of any of the younger companies during the last year.

John Sutton, the tall blond and handsome Twentieth Century-Fox discovery, so pleased the powers-that-be in "Hudson's Bay" that he now gets himself a lead. He'll have the chief male role in "Man Hunt," formerly "Rogue Male," which John Ford is directing. If young John doesn't emerge a star with Ford directing him, then we'll say he's lost his golden opportunity. He's an American lad of English-born parents with an interesting history. His father was in the wealthy class until the depression came and then the Sutton money was lost and John went out to work. Now he will probably be able to support his family in the way to which they have been accustomed.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Broderick Crawford and Kay Griffith will be married within the next two months. They have already picked out their home in Brentwood; the cutest pair in town—Ann Gillis and Jackie Moran stepping out at the La Conga; I couldn't help but comment how beautiful Ilona Massey is since she is so thin. She was dining at the Brown Derby with Alan Curtis; Sylvia Sidney and her infant son are in town. She had quite a reception at the preview of "Foreign Correspondent," where she went with Franchot Tone; Mae Murray, who keeps her figure and her looks, dining tete-a-tete with M. M. McCallen, the mayor of Huntington Park, at House of Murphy; Michael Visaroff's daughter, Leda, becomes the bride of Dr. Dale Alkov in November.

Katherine Craig (Fay Feltus) will make a test at Paramount and nobody else but her boy friend, Robert Preston, will act with her; Priscilla Lane recovering from a spinal operation; Rita and Eddie Lowe have reached a settlement, so it looks as if their parting this time is final. Too bad; Nat Pendleton finished a seven-year contract at Metro and plans to do a personal appearance tour; John Shelton and Julie Colt (yes, of the revolver family) stepping out; Claire Trevor's hair is chestnut color now after being platinum blonde for so long; Tina Thayer, under contract to Frank Capra, has been doing the town with Lew Ayres; Lynn Bari left for New York to join Walter Kane; forgot to say I lunched with Bob Taplinger at 21 when I was in New York. Bob remains in the East for the "Knute Rockne" broadcast at South Bend; Ruth Foran left today to join him and that romance is really hot.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Tigers Beat Tribe for Flag, Fans Riot

York's 2-Run Homer Helps Rookie Beat Feller, 2 to 0

Detroit Catcher Tebbetts Is Hurt When Struck by Basket of Garbage

By Bob Considine.

Municipal Stadium, Cleveland, Sept. 27.—The long-shot Detroit Tigers, oldest and worst fielding team in the majors, won the 1940 American League pennant here today, abruptly ending the hottest pennant race the league had known since 1908.

The Tigers won the hard way, whipping the Cleveland pitching ace, Bobby Feller, 2-0, in a game played before a hostile crowd of 45,553. The big irate mob, half of them women, pelted the Tigers with a ton of vegetables, fruit and veteran eggs.

One upper grandstand fan was arrested after dropping a heavy basket of beer bottles and decayed fruit on the head of Birdie Tebbetts, Tiger catcher, as Tebbetts sat on the bullpen bench. The fan was badly beaten, first by arresting officers and later by Tebbetts.

The Tiger victory, born of a two-run home run by Rudy York in the fourth inning, and a superb pitching job by young Floyd Giebell, Manager Del Baker's surprise pitching choice, put the Detroit Club three games ahead of the Indians. The clubs have only two more games left in this final series of the season. The New York Yankees, who had a slim mathematical chance to tie for the lead, and thus make necessary the league's first play-off, lost all chance today by dropping a 6-2 decision to the Athletics in Philadelphia.

Tigers Were 15.1 Shots

A 15-to-1 shot on Jack Doyle's odds board at the start of the season, and almost the unanimous choice of baseball experts to finish in the second division, the Tigers took the lead on September 9 and held it by transparent margins or were within striking distance, right down to the end. Their September record is now 18 victories out of 27 starts, and they won most of them as they won today—by making up for their fielding blunders with timely bludgeoning.

Goat of this final ignominy for the "cry-baby" Cleveland team, which held a 4½-game lead as the race entered the home stretch, was Ben Chapman, one of the signers of the appeal for the banishment of Cleveland Manager Ossie Vitt.

Giebel struck out Chapman three times, once with men on first and third with one out, once with men on first and second with no outs, and once with men on second and third with one out. And to cap a day's performance that will haunt him to his grave, Chapman got his glove on York's homer, but was unable to keep the ball from caroming off into the stands.

Giebell, who allowed six hits to Feller's three, but walked only two to Feller's six, will not be eligible to play for the Tigers in the World Series, which opens next Wednesday in Cincinnati.

The Detroit club brought him up ten days ago from Buffalo, where his record was 15 wins against 16 defeats. He beat the Athletics last week, 13-2, in his first start. The cotton-headed, ice-cold right-hander, whose curve spits like a live wire when it breaks over the plate, is ineligible because he wasn't on the Tiger roster September 1, closing date for all World Series players.

To Get Share of Series

He was voted a small share of the series melon this week, but from the way he was pounced on late today by the jubilant Tigers and carried off the field on their shoulders, he seems destined for a larger slice.

Today's bitterly fought game had the mob so worked up that Chief Umpire Bill Summers threatened to forfeit the game and award the Tigers a victory, after Hank Green-

G. W. U. Beats Mounts, 12-0, as Batson Stars

11,000 See Reserve Halfback Sparkle in Both Touchdown Drives Over Mount St. Mary's

By Jack Munhall

Stubby Ken Batson, entering the game as a reserve halfback in the third quarter last night, needled a sluggish George Washington eleven into a brief frenzy that netted the Colonials two quick touchdowns and a 12-0 opening game victory over scrappy little Mount St. Mary's at Griffith Stadium.

The largest crowd to see a George Washington opening in four years—an estimated 11,000 fans—watched Batson, a 165-pound senior, spark twin scoring drives of 65 yards. The 5-foot 6-inch Madisonville, Tex., youngster personally scored the second six-pointed on a 9-yard end sweep after Walter Fedora had counted the first touchdown from the Mounts' 6, where Batson's savage running had placed the ball.

The initial George Washington drive started with the kickoff opening the second half, the Colonials piling up four first downs in a steady march. The second followed several minutes later after Mount St. Mary's had lost the ball on downs.

Colonials Relax Again

Batson left the game to an ovation after this second score and the Colonials immediately relapsed into the same pepless play that marked their first half showing.

In this, the inaugural of its Golden Jubilee of football, George Washington was not impressive offensively save for the 12, the few minutes that the stocky Batson was pounding his broad flat feet through the Mount St. Mary's line in a one-man parade.

Defensively, however, the Colonials showed well for an opening game effort. Despite the seven first downs made by the Maryland visitors, George Washington never was in danger of yielding a touchdown.

Team Stays on Ground

For the most part, G. W., under wraps for Friday night's test against high-powered Manhattan, stuck closely to straight power plays. Not until the third period did the Colonials resort to forward passing and they threw only eight during the game, completing two and having one intercepted.

Because of the stubbornness of the Mounts, who had been underrated in the George Washington camp since swamped, 40-0, by Maryland in a practice game, the Colonials were unable to make planned wholesale substitutions.

Colonial Coach Bill Reinhart used ten backs, and the most impressive combination proved to be

Cleveland Ladies Set New Low at Game

Municipal Stadium, Cleveland, Sept. 27.—Not in the memory of the oldest graybeard in the press box has there been a big league parallel of the atrocious conduct of a Cleveland Ladies Day crowd here today.

Pelted with a ton of vintage vegetables before the game (the Tiger players enticed this barrage deliberately in the hope of depleting the ferocious crowd's "ammunition" before activities started) the mob continued its abuse to a point where Chief Umpire Bill Summers and Cleveland Manager Ossie Vitt had to make personal appeals to the stands.

Vitt's pleading "Ladies and gentlemen please refrain from throwing. May the best team win," came in the midst of a wild scene after an unidentified fan had stunned Birdie Tebbetts, Tiger catcher.

Fan Is Arrested

The fan, who was arrested after a savage fist fight with three officers, dropped a bushel basket of vegetables and beer bottles on Tebbett's head from the second tier of the stadium. The heavy package fell about 60 feet and scored a direct hit. It knocked Tebbetts off the bull pen bench, on which he was sitting with a group of Tiger players.

Immediately the heavy police guard rushed on the field, several of them gesticulating up at the stands, to guide nearby police to the bomber. He was soon located, but put up a bristling fight.

Perhaps by coincidence, perhaps not, the officer in charge of the arresting police ordered the fan taken to the dressing room to meet Tebbetts in person.

By the time the cops had dragged the fan to the Tiger locker room, Tebbetts had been revived and helped to that point by teammates.

Wearly Wins Three Events In Regatta

Fred Jacoby Is Beaten; Salesman Scores 2,400 Points

By Marshall Andrews

A 24-year-old tombstone salesman from Munice, Ind., yesterday all but made the President's Cup Regatta a one-man affair, taking all outboard events he entered and roundly trouncing Fred Jacoby, current holder of the George H. Townsend Medal.

Paul Wearly, the racing monument salesman in question, took first place in the Class A, B and C professional races and was prevented from entering, and probably running away with, the Class F open only by lack of a Class F motor. Winning all there events, he piled up 2,400 points and made himself regatta champion in the three classes. Wearly already holds the national championship in classes A and C.

Fourteen Races Today

Fourteen events will be run today, including the first 15-mile heat in the race for the President's Cup. Harold Wilson, of Ingersoll, Ontario, Canada, who defeated Herb Mendelson, of Detroit, to take the cup to Canada last year, will not be on hand today to defend it.

Instead, the keenest competition would appear to be brewing between Sidney Allen, of Southampton, Long Island, and Zamie Simmons, of Greenwich, Conn., from whom he took the Gold Cup this year. Mendelson will be on hand with his Notre Dame, which gave Wilson's Miss Canada a fight for the President's Cup in 1931.

Other entries on hand yesterday for the big event were Horace Dodge, of Detroit, 1928 champion, with his Miss Syndicate; George

College Grid Teams Start Action Today

Few 'Breathers' Listed; Minnesota, Washington Featured

By the United Press

New York, Sept. 27.—The 1940 college football season opens tomorrow and virtually all the big schools start off against top-flight competitio ..

The "breathers" are gone from most schedules this year as inaugural day games bring together teams which you would normally expect to be playing in November. Seven important intersectional clashes will be topped by Washington-Minnesota—the day's No. 1 game—at Minneapolis. All sections of the land have standout games on tap. Washington, picked as the team to beat for the Pacific Coast Conference title, is favored because of Minnesota's lack of reserve strength.

The No. 2 game also pairs the Pacific Coast against the Midwest—Michigan-California, in Berkeley, Calif. Michigan flew to the Coast in easy stages and is reported to be in top physical condition.

In the South, Boston College, rated as one of the East's best elevens, goes against Tulane. Boston College opened its season last week with a 40-to-0 victory over Centre College, but this will be Tulane's opening test.

A few of the major conferences have games which will be counted in the battles for the division titles. In the Southwestern Conference, Florida plays Mississippi State and Louisiana State tackles Mississippi. The Southern Conference has three games with Defending Champion Duke playing Virginia Military, North Carolina playing a tough Wake Forest team, and North Carolina State facing Davidson.

The only other conference game in the land sends Southern California, defending champions on the Pacific Coast, into action against Washington State.

Yanks' Hopes For Pennant Die as Macks Triumph, 6-2

Babich Beats Champs Fifth Time; Russo, Murphy and Sundra Bow in Last Bid

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 27.—The top-heavy four-year dominance of the New York Yankees over the American League ended today.

The World Champions lost the last slim chance they had of gaining their fifth straight triumph when a one-time Yankee farmhand, Johnny Babich, limited them to five hits while his Philadelphia Athletic mates banged out a 6-2 triumph, in the last meeting of the two teams this year.

Babich, who had conquered the Yankees four times previously this year, was superb today in snapping the Yankees' latest bid for honors and an eight-game winning streak. Once before during their belated drive for the title they won eight straight—and that time, too, it was Johnny Babich who stopped them.

Only Five-Game Winner

The right-hand slider ball specialist is the only pitcher in the league to beat the Yankees five times this year—and his fifth was certainly the greatest of them all, for old Connie Mack, who has built some American League champions himself, predicted the collapse of the Yanks—and his team put on the clincher.

The Yanks fought bitterly to hang onto their last hope for a pennant, although it was an uphill fight all the way.

Marius Russo started and was touched for a run in the first inning when Wally Moses singled, moved to second on a walk to Bob Johnson and scored on Frankie Hayes' single to center.

Brief Hurling Duel

The two hurlers hooked up in a fine pitching duel until the sixth with Babich yielding only one hit in that time. Then Sam Chapman put the A's further out in front with his twenty-second homer of the year.

Johnny Murphy came in to pitch for the Yanks in the seventh and singles by Al Brancato and Moses and a double by Chapman drove two more runs home.

In the eighth the A's got two more when Hayes opened with a walk and Dick Siebert singled, and both runners advanced an extra base when Charley Keller fumbled the ball. That was all for Murphy and he was replaced by Steve Sundra.

Davis Singles

Sundra was immediately greeted by a single to center by Davis that scored both runners.

It wasn't until the ninth that the Yanks could score. With one last surge, Bill Dickey and Babe Dahlgren both singled, Bill Knickerbocker, batting for Sundra, singled to left, scoring Dickey and sending Babe to third from where he scored on Joe Gordon's long fly that Chapman got with a sensational running catch. But Babich bore down and retired them with no further damage—and the Yankee Saga had ended.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

POVICH

It was Socrates, or maybe Evil Eye Finkle, who first observed that the only substitute for experience is luck, and young Pat Comiskey had neither the other night when he found himself in the ring against Max Baer. Just before he went out the other evening—out cold on the ropes in the first round—Comiskey was supposed to be America's white hope for the restoration of Nordic supremacy in the prize ring.

Just why it is supposed to be strictly essential that a Caucasian be the prize fight champion of the world has always mystified us, but at any rate many folks are restless until a white man holds the title. We always considered Joe Louis a pretty good sort of champion, certainly the best fighter, and unassailable on moral grounds. Save for the fuss in Europe, which Louis certainly didn't cause, the world seems to have struggled along pretty well during his three years at the top of the fistic heap.

For his two-and-a-half minute invasion of big time boxing, young Comiskey has only the memories of a futile build-up, a chin that must be sore, and an $8,229 share of the Baer fight purse. It is apparent that he wasn't ready to get in there with any such person as Baer despite his 30-odd fights as a professional. The first time he was crowded to the ropes he was bewildered and at Baer's mercy.

Smart fighters are rarely hurt on the ropes, particularly in the first round when they are supposed to have their strength and be able to shake off any distress. Most good fighters can take refuge in the ropes. Johnny Dundee used to use the ropes as an ally in there, bouncing off 'em and befuddling his foe, but to naive Comiskey they were nothing more than a horrible trap.

Of course it can be pointed out that the ropes was where Max Schmeling met his unhappy fate in his second fight with Joe Louis, but that fact was merely a coincidence of the bout. Schmeling was licked before Louis draped him on the ropes. When the Teuton was crowded into the hemp, he already had suffered the nerve injury to his back and was easy prey for Louis who had previously pounded him unmercifully to the body.

Comiskey is seemingly something less than the fighting genius his handlers had pretended him to be. It is not difficult to recall now that when he was licked by old ringwise Steve Dudas last year he was beaten by the first man who didn't properly qualify as one of the long skein of set-ups fed to the young Jerseyman in his build-up campaign. Comiskey squared accounts with Dudas a few months later but the fact remains that he didn't beat much fighter.

At this stage of Comiskey's career, one of two things appears perfectly apparent (1), he rushed along too fast into top-flight fights or (2) he doesn't have the native ability to be a good fighter. From what we have seen of the fellow, we incline to the former theory. On the surface, he has all the native physical equipment of a champion. There is no dispute about his punching ability, and on occasion during his build-up he showed not only a willingness but an ability to take a punch.

But Comiskey hasn't developed any of the wiles or ring guile that a top-flight fighter is supposed to have. Joe Louis was fighting and beating first-rate heavyweights after far fewer than the 30 professional fights Comiskey had under his belt. Jim Jeffries won the world's heavyweight championship in his twelfth professional fight, honest. Louis and Jeffries, however, did not lead the same sheltered early life in the ring that his handlers arranged for Comiskey. They were fighting tough guys most of the time.

His fight with Max Baer the other night probably isn't the last that big-time rings will see of Comiskey. He's not yet 20 and he's virtually certain to bounce back to a fair heavyweight rating. One defeat rarely ends a fight career. Jack Dempsey was considering himself a pretty good fighter, according to his autobiography, "Round by Round," when he was knocked out in two minutes by Fireman Jim Flynn. Joe Louis has been a better fighter and champion since his knockout by Max Schmeling.

Comiskey was supposed to represent the stimulant that would needle some interest into the heavyweight division, and promoters were praying that he would beat Baer. But paradoxically, the defeat of Comiskey and the way it was accomplished by Baer will serve the promoters' interests as well, if not better. All of a sudden Baer has re-established himself in the fight business and even New York may be attempted to stage a Louis-Baer fight which, before the other night, it had been willing to surrender to Chicago.

The low esteem in which Baer was held following his knockout by Louis when Maxie showed more common sense than courage, seems to be vanishing under the force of events. He staged a gallant if losing battle against Lou Nova, and then he beat Tony Galento into a blubbery pulp. His stream-lined knockout of Comiskey the other night labels Baer as something of a phoenix out of the ashes. Next summer it is sure to be Louis vs. Baer.

Red Sox Rout Nats, 24 to 4, With Nonstop Hit Parade

Special Dispatch to The Post

Boston, Sept. 27.—The Nats and home plate took a terrific beating here today as the Red Sox trampled both the Washington club and the diamond-shaped dise at Fenway Park. The score was—honest—24 to 4, and the Nats were not the winners.

The Red Sox's giddy parade across the plate warmed up with a run in the first inning, quickened with a five-run third and burst into full glory with a ten-run fourth inning. The Nats were still breathing, so the Red Sox staged a seven-run crusher in the eighth inning.

Rene Monteagudo was the losing pitcher, but he was comparatively guiltless despite the six runs he allowed in the first three innings. The pitching accomplices who came after him—Louis Thuman and Joe Krakauskas—were the chief culprits. The Nats' No. 1 wrecker was, in fact, Krakauskas. He came into the game to catch most of the ten-run onslaught in the fourth and then—all by himself—pitched those seven runs to the Red Sox in the eighth.

The Nats made 11 hits, but they were outhit by 11 hits in the grand batting carnival of the Red Sox. The game was a breeze for Freddy Ostermueller, who was grinning behind his 16-to-2 lead after the fourth inning.

The strange part of it was that the Nats held the lead for 2½ innings. Cecil Travis' single and Jack Sanford's double drove two runs across the plate in the first inning, but in the third a heavy object, probably a safe, crashed down about the ears of Monteagudo.

The Red Sox packed five runs and five hits into that third inning.

Anacostia High Plays St. John's to 7-7 Tie

Underdogs Score Early But Falter

Spiess, Johnnie Back, Earns Deadlock With 33-Yard Dash in 4th Period; Abshur

By Bill Burnett

A desperate down-field drive in the fourth period, capped by Buddy Spiess' 33-yard sprint through the center of Anacostia High's line, gave St. John's a 7-7 tie with the Indians yesterday in the first football game of the year for both clubs.

Despite the stalemate, however, the Indians were credited with another of their grid upsets. It was the first time in three years of competition that Anacostia has wound up less than two touchdowns behind the Johnnies. Since tossing a grid team on the local scene, Anacostia has never lacked for at least two upsets during a season.

2,000 School Fans on Hand

Approximately 2,000 fans in the new stadium on the "flats" saw what may develop as one of the year's most exciting battles. The Indians pushed over a touchdown in the opening stanza on the heels of a Johnnie fumble, and except for young Spiess might have emerged with a victory.

The first really covetous glance Spiess and the Johnnies cast at the goal came on the final play of the third period. Anacostia's Bob Nolte had elected to pass on fourth down with 1 yard to go, and the toss was knocked down.

Then Speiss romped from his own 17 to the 34 for a first down, rested while Harold Krugg and Tom Chisari picked up 3 yards between them, and then annexed another first down with a dash to the 46. The three Johnnie stalwarts proceeded to the Anacostia 38 without much difficulty, from which point Spiess passed to Quarterback Steve Burns on the 28.

March 83 Yards

A 5-yard loss by Chisari was sandwiched in before Spiess set out on his important jaunt. Little Billy Spencer was the only Anacostian in a position to stop him after he went through the secondary, but he was too far behind. Chisari's placement successfully wound up a scoring march of 83 yards.

Anacostia's big break occurred after only five or six plays of the first period. Chisari fumbled and End George Abshur, who was easily the outstanding player on the field, pounced on the ball on the Saint 24. A pass, Nolte to Ed Hoffman, moved the Indians to the 7, and from there Phil Craig twisted around lift end on a triple reverse for six points. Ernie Schaffer's placement was perfect.

Largely through the work of Young Spiess, who personally accounted for 108 yards in ten trips with the ball, St. John's had 185 yards gained from scrimmage to 62 for Anacostia. Eleven Johnnie passes, six of which were good, gained exactly 100 yards more, while the Indians completed four out of eight aerials for 61 yards. They also intercepted three of the foe's tosses.

First downs were 12-3 favoring St. John's, which committed three fumbles to Anacostia's two. Nolte averaged 33 yards on five punts, one of which was blocked.

Gonzaga Plays Central High Eleven Today

Though four local scholastic elevens see their first action of the season today, Gonzaga's invasion of Central Stadium for a meeting with the defenders is theonly clash in town. Eastern moves out to Alexandria to angle with Episcopal in the afternoon, and Western will battle George Washington High in the same city at night.

With Central slightly weaker than in the last few years, a well-touted Gonzaga eleven is given a good chance of winning the local game which starts at 2:30. Neither line is expected to beoverpowerful, and in the backfield the Purple have the edge by one seasoned player.

Central's only letterman ball-carrier is Harry Martin, while Gonzaga boasts two stars, Bobby Mulvihill and Elmer Raba.

Western and G. W. go into their battle on almost even terms. If Eastern is able to defeat Episcopal it will be the first time in three years it has turned the trick. It has a young and spirited club, but only three lettermen ready for action.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Richmond, Va., Sept. 27.—John Marshall High, Richmond, opened its football season today with a 28-0 victory over Roosevelt High, Washington.

The Justices scored in each period and their backs got loose for long runs to mark up two of six-pointers.

Roosevelt High's best chance was nullified by the half-time whistle, with the ball on Marshall's 17-yard line. A forward pass from Robert Stein to Dick Goodman, good for 27 yards, was in the air when timer's whistle sounded.

Ed Saxby scored two of Justices' touchdowns, first in opening quarter on 3-yard thrust and second in third on dash of 23 yards. Raymond Beasley scampered 54 yards for another tally in second period, and Bill Klein registered last in fourth on a 6-yard smash.

First downs even, six and six, but Roosevelt High was master in air and counted five first downs on overhead route.

Vic Gauzza To Again Head Grid League

After a one-year layoff, Vic Gauzza, popular sandlot sports promoter, will resume the presidency of the National City 140-Pound Football League, it was announced last night.

Eight teams will be in action when the season starts next Sunday, all except the Anacostia Lions playing out of local boys clubs. Four police elevens—Nos. 4, 5, 10 and 11—Friendship House, Georgetown Boys Club and Alexandria Boys Club will compete.

Gauzza also announced last night the windup games of his National City Baseball Leauge. Klein Tavern and Plaza Tile, winners of A and B section titles, will meet tomorrow on the South Ellipse at 1 p. m. If Plaza, which won the opener last Sunday, is victorious only one game will be played and the tilemen will get the unlimited championship. A second game will be necessary if Klein wins.

The junior division crown will also be settled when Naiman Photos and Cardinal A. C. meet on the East Ellipse at 2:30. It will be a one-game playoff for the title.

W.-L. High Swamps N.T.S. By 27-0 Score

The Little Generals of Washington-Lee High took the first step toward continuing the undefeated record, started at the first of last year, yesterday when they trounced the National Training School eleven, 27 to 0, at the Bladensburg road gridiron.

For one period the Trainers held the feared Generals scoreless, but in the second quarter they began to roll. Fullback DeCelle sliced through from the 3-yard stripe to register the first score and before the period was over Russ Arnaud had accounted for another tally. Tackle Johnson pulled out of the line to convert successfully on the second score.

Both of the last-half six-pointers were credited to Arnaud. In the third quarter he again hit the line for a short gain and a touchdown, but in the fourth he rang up the longest run of the game to close scoring—40 yards. Johnson and Shepherd, respectively, hung an extra point on each six-pointer.

The Little Generals tried only three passes and made one good. Coach Johnnie Baker forced his players to concentrate on line play. The Trainers never threatened seriously, their main hope being to keep the score down.

2d Place at Stake For Yanks Today In Twin Bill Here

The New York Yankees—their pennant hopes blasted—will be attempting to salvage second place in the American League today when they encounter the Nats in a double-header at Griffith Stadium starting at 1 p. m.

A half game behind the second-place Indians, the Yankees will meet up with Sid Hudson and Ken Chase in the twin bill today. Tomorrow, the Nats will send Dutch Leonard at the New York club.

The Indians will be meeting the Tigers in single games today and tomorrow at Cleveland. A defeat for Cleveland today and one Yankee victory in the double bill would create a tie for second place, to be decided in Sunday's final games of the season.

Six-Day Race Ends Tonight; 2 Teams Tied

Peden and Moretti, Audy, Vopel Deadlocked Crash Retires Pair

Washington's first international six-day bicycle race will wind up at midnight at Riverside Stadium. Seven of the nine teams that started last Sunday night will be in there to battle it out for first honors. The finish promises to be a thrilling one and the final hour will be marked by a sprint every mile for points in which the points will tally 72 for first, 4 for second, 2 for third and 1 for fourth. It promises to be a night of jamming as well as sprinting.

At midnight two teams were tied for first place. They were: William "Torchy" Peden and Cesar Moretti and Jules Audy and Heinz Vopel. One lap behind the leaders were: Bill Anderson and Fred Ottevaire, Archie Bollaert and Gerard De-Baets, Alf Letourner and Angelo De Bacco, Ewald Wissel and Charley Yaccino were four laps behind and in last place were Al Sellinger and Johnny Eiler, eight laps behind.

Bike fans saw another sensational spill last night when Angelo De Bacco, Johnny Eiler, Al Sellinger, Alf Letourner and Freddie Ottevaere crashed to the track. All were able to get up without any help, but the race was held up a half hour while Ottevaere's injuries were dressed and when the race was resumed Anderson carried on alone, to give Ottevaere a rest.

In a spill in the afternoon George Shipman was put out of the race with a broken collar bone and a badly lacerated arm while Gustav Kilian was also forced to retire from the race due to injuries he sustained. Kilian crashed into the fence after puncturing a tire and Shipman went down in the same spill.

Miss Jameson Meets Cothran

Del Monte, Calif., Sept. 27.—Thirty-six-hole finals in the Women's National golf championship tomorrow will find Defending Champion Betty Jameson, of San Antonio, pitted against Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., over the Pebble beach links.

In the eighteen holes semifinals this afternoon, played in the face of a northwest wind which played havoc with the California contenders, Miss Jameson defeated Clara Callender, of Long Beach, 5 and 3, and Miss Cothran scored a 2-up victory over Mrs. James Ferrie, of Pasadena.

The latter match ended in dramatic fashion at the eighteenth green after Mrs. Ferrie had made a gallant fight to overcome a 5-up lead Miss Cothran had held at the tenth. Three down and three to go Mrs. Ferrie won the sixteenth and the seventeenth holes and looked to have an excellent chance of squaring the match at the eighteenth when Miss Cothran was over the green on her fourth. From nearly 40 fet away the latter chipped into the cup for a par and a two-up victory.

Crimson Tide Downs Spring Hill, 26 to 0

Mobile, Ala., Sept. 27 (U.P.).—The Alabama Crimson Tide, played to a standstill for the first half by a heavily outweighed, but determined Spring Hill eleven, displayed flashes of power in the final two quarters to sweep over the Badgers with a 26 to 0 triumph before 8,500 fans.

Playing in Mobile for the first times since 1924, the Tide scored in every quarter with the exception of the first and used their fighting foe to polish up a ground attack, resorting to serials only five times, only one of which was completed.

Reds' Defeat Gives Pirates Fourth Place

Elliott Scores Winning Run on Vaughan's Double in Tenth

By International News Service

Cincinnati, Sept. 27.—Pittsburgh clinched fourth place in the National League today by defeating Cincinnati's champion Reds, 4 to 3, in ten innings to score their first win at Crosley Field this season.

Bob Elliott, after being hit by one of Whitey Moore's pitches, stole second and scored the winning run on Arky Vaughan's double in the tenth. Rip Sewell, who replaced Oadis Swigart in the ninth, was the winner.

The Reds tied the contest in the ninth on singles by Joost and Myers and Riggs' two-bagger. When Myers attempted to score the winning run, he was cut off at the plate. Paul Derringer, warming up for the World Series with Detroit, worked the first seven innings, giving up seven hits and three runs.

Chisox Beat Browns, 4-3, In 10 Innings

By International News Service

Chicago, Sept. 27.—The White Sox traveled ten innings today to nose out St. Louis, 4 to 3, and take a firmer hold on fourth place in the American League.

In the tenth Joe Kuhel walked, moved to third on Moose Solters' single and scored the winning run on Luke Appling's single. Young Bob Harris was charged with the loss. The walk to Kuhel was the only one he issued in the extra-inning fracas. Bill Dietrich was the winner.

Fred Perry Meets Budge or Tilden For Pro Net Title

Chicago, Sept. 27 (INS).—Fred Perry, former Davis Cup star, Sunday will meet Bill Tilden or Don Budge for the National Professional Tennis Championship following the Englishman's slashing victory today over John Nogrady, of Montclair, N. J.

Perry stopped Nogrady's "upset campaign" with scores of 6—4, 6—3, 4—6 and 6—4. Nogrady previously had swept Vinnie Richards and Karel Kozeluh from the tourney.

Tilden and Budge clash tomorrow for the privilege of meeting Perry in Sunday's final. The doubles championship will be determined the same day.

Hubbell Loses To Phils, 6 to 0; Homers Count

Hurler Drops Below .500 Mark First Time Since Joining Giants

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 27.—For the first time since he joined the Giants in 1928 Carl Hubbell will finish a season with a pitching percentage of less than .500.

The old master of the screwball lost his twelfth of the season to the Phillies, 6-0, today in his last appearance of a disastrous Giant campaign. He won 11 this year.

The Phils, touching him for 11 of their 12 hits, and all their runs, handed the king his fifth straight setback.

All the Phils' scoring came on home runs—by Chuck Klein in the fifth with one on and Ben Warren in the eighth with two aboard. Hub stayed through the eighth before retiring for a pinch hitter.

Hugh Mulcahy, Hub's opposition on the mound, hurled a four-hitter to chalk up his third shutout victory and his thirteenth of the season, against 22 lost.

Kentucky's Fleet Backs Defeat Xavier, 13 to 0

Cincinnati, Sept. 27 (INS).—Fleet University of Kentucky backs hammered through the Xavier University line tonight for a 13-to-0 victory before 12,000 fans.

Kentucky scored its first 6 points in the opening period when Junior Jones, quarterback, returned a punt 48 yards, but missed the try for extra point. Dave Zoeller, halfback, added the second touchdown in the third period when he raced 56 yards through a half dozen Xavier defenders. Jones converted.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Cleveland, Sept. 27 (INS).—There is not much doubt that Bill Terry, who ghosted "how to win friends and influence people," will be wistfully mentioned more than once when Alva Bradley, president of the Indians, and C. C. Slapnicka, go into their huddle and pick the next manager of the Indians.

CONSIDINE

The manager that the Indians now have, a Mr. Vitt, nagged the club into a huge profit and a stern bid for the pennant, but he hurt some of the players' feelings. So he must go. Bradley, too timid to take his side, or the side of the players, set a new intersectional record for fence straddling. Slapnicka overruled Vitt when Vitt ordered Jeff Heath to take off his uniform a month or so ago.

We have long thought that Terry would make a great manager for Cleveland. The club's pouting players deserve this bleak, businesslike leader. Terry might even win a pennant here, for he's a good man with experienced players. The Giants have worn out, and with that decomposition Terry's rep as a great manager has folded. He is either exceptionally incompetent or exceptionally unlucky at developing young players. He has yet to come up with one.

Bradley thinks Terry is tops as a manager. He made a bid for him a couple of years ago and Bill, whom Hank Lieber says tried to intercede with a mutual friend to make Hank take $2,000 less than the Giants were willing to pay him in his sophomore year, used the offer to get a new contract and more dough out of the Giants. Bradley doubtlessly would snatch Terry in a jiffy to replace Vitt, if he could get him. And from what we hear he can. For Terry and Horace Stoneham are said to be phitting. Horace fired Terry's friend, Bert Niehoff, from Jersey City the other day, though Bert won a pennant last year and finished third this year.

Terry gave off a broad hint not long ago that he might not be with the Giants in 1941. He slapped a blanket fine on his listless, colorless ball club during the recent doleful losing streak. Fifty dollars a head, according to one of the players. He relented a mite in the cases of Mickey Witek and Johnny Rucker, reducing their fines to $25 because they don't make much money. During the course of his dour lecture he said something like "whether I'm here or not next season . . . etc."

We'd like to recommend that the 1941 Giants be rebuilt around Danning, Jurges, Young, Demaree, Ken Smith and Eddie Brannick. Heading the list of persons to be traded away should be Terry and Horace Stoneham, who have combined in one way or another to curdle the public on a ball club that had more good will than most of the other major league teams combined. When a team whose history is as deeply entwined with the roots of a city as the Giants' history is with New York draws only a few hundred paid admissions to its games—in an area with a population of 10,000,000—it is time to clean house.

The picture of the frigid pilot sitting to one side of his glum players doesn't fit in with the accepted notion of sport. The Giants had about as much color this year as a bowl of scrapple. Players came back to the bench, fresh from some feat or blunder, and got the same silent reception from their teammates as the boss gave them. The team was a remarkably developed bore, except for an occasional whiff of the old Hubbell or a sock by Danning, from the day the season opened.

It was a tough year for Brannick, the traveling secretary who grew up with the team and is full of the charm, the dazzle and the infectious friendliness of the old firm. He had a tough enough time trying to take the curse off Terry's brusque manner with public, player and press during the good years. But this was a bad year, maybe the worst since 1902. Brannick worked very loyally, as he always will, but as we say it must have been the toughest job in the sport. He is the link between the old aggressive Giants and that haunted outfit which populated the Polo Grounds this year—if you could call the Polo Grounds populated. He is, too, the promise of a return to the old glories, if the torpid liver of the club is given a shake-up from top to bottom.

Hoyas Open Against Roanoke; Terps Meet Maroons Today

Georgetown Heavy Choice Over Foes

Hilltoppers Start 67th Grid Season In Griffith Stadium Tonight at 8 P. M.

By Jack Munhall

With plucky little Roanoke College serving as the guinea pig, Georgetown University tonight will test for the first time the eleven with which it hopes to sweep to a third successive undefeated season.

When the opening kickoff booms down the field at Griffith Stadium at 8 p. m. probably the most promising football squad in Hoya history will begin to take apart a pitifully weak Roanoke eleven, whose entire attack is vested in the triple-threat ability of 195-pound Halfback Bill Hancock.

The Hilltoppers will open their sixty-seventh year of intercollegiate football with the largest squad of Coach Jack Hagerty's eight-year regime, 45 players, including 12 two-letter winners and 8 one-monogram bearers. The total of 20 veterans averages 192 pounds.

Augmenting this formidable array of Georgetown material are most of the stars from the crack 1939 freshman outfit, boys like Jack Doolan, the former national intercollegiate sprint champion, and Russ Sorce, 265 pounds of bristling tackle.

Even the fact that Georgetown tonight will be without the services of seven players because of injuries, cannot cloud a Hilltop football picture that is unusually rosy.

Maroons Beaten Last Week

On the other hand will be an outnumbered and outclassed Maroon opponent that was blasted to a 33-0 defeat last week by V. M. I. Though Roanoke Coach Carroll (Pop) White is considered one of the ablest small college mentors in the country his task tonight seems insurmountable.

On the whole Roanoke squad there appears to be only two good college players. One of them, the great and versatile Hancock, has been mentioned. The other is Harold Landis, a 185-pound tackle who until worn down by superior numbers should give the Hoya backfield an interesting evenings.

Besides Hancock, who is rated equally as good defensively as offensively, Roanoke's only scoring threat is 156-pound scatback, Charles (Monk) Andrews.

In the starting Georgetown line-up will be the most of the players who hoisted the school's blue and gray colors high on the Eastern grid pole last season. Only five of the squad that defeated seven opponents and whose only failure was a 13-13 tie with Syracuse will be missing.

They are End Francis Red Daly and Fullbacks Myron Darmohray and Frank Meglen, who were graduated, and End Bob Kercher and Tackle Ed Kowalski, who became scholastic croppers.

Old Stars on Hand

Cavorting in the Georgetown backfield will be such well-known Hoya heroes as Lou Ghecas, whose 76-yard gallop saved the Syracuse game; Jules Koshlap, whose sure-fire forward passing climaxed Georgetown's season with a stunning victory over N. Y. U.; Joe McFadden, a great and inspirational leader, whose touch at quarterback is always deft, and Jim Castiglia, the bulky fullback, who at times is a magnificent blocker.

The Georgetown line will be manned, for the most part, by heavy and powerful veterans. Chris Pavich, a slender pass-catching demon of an end, likely will be the only sophomore starter. Art Lemke, a junior, will be at the other flank.

Holding down the tackle posts will be Earl Fullilove and Joe Daniels, a pair of 225-pounders. At guards will be Augie Lio, the All-Eastern choice and a star field-goal booter, and Pete Ostinato. Center will be the very capable Al Matuza.

Ready for immediate relief of the starters will be champion shot-putter and 245-pound tackle Al Blozis, and the bigger Sorce; center Jim Reichey, and end, Mike Kopcik. All of the Georgetown squad, however, is almost certain to see action. This excludes, of course, the seven-man casualty list

One-Man Epidemic Strikes Professional Outboarders at Cup Regatta

Paul Wearly, of Muncie, Ind., who sells tombstones when he's not winning outboard races, cleaned up yesterday in all three professional classes in the President's Cup Regatta. In the start of the Class B professional event, Wearly is second from the camera, boat No. H-22. The 24-year-old flash is shown (inset) rounding a turn in the Class A professional tilt, which he also won.

Simmons will drive his My Sin; Mendelson, 1935 and 1937 champion, will enter his Notre Dame again, and Allen will be at the wheel of Hotsy Totsy III.

Officials Decide

Twice yesterday officials were forced to decide on winners of amateur events by mathematical sleight of hand. The first of these was when Frank J. Desmond, of Short Hills, N. J., and Leon Guthrie, of Cleveland, Ohio, finished the Class B amateur in a dead heat for points, each with a total of 700. That one was unscrambled by deciding the victor on the basis of elapsed time, which gave the contest to Desmond, who raced the two heats 10¼ seconds faster than Guthrie.

The other case was that of the midget amateur event, in which Richard McFayden, of Montclair, N. J., successfully defended his championship, by less than a hair's breadth, against Don Whitfield, of Upper Montclair, his closest friend. McFayden's little Gladiator and Whitfield's Annihilator crossed the line so close together no casual spectator could have decided the winner except by a toss-up. The race officially went to McFayden by the hardly discernible margin of one-fifth of a second.

Recall Boats

One heat, the first for Class A professionals, had to be recalled and run over after all other events were concluded when starters jumped the gun and failed to see the signal calling for a fresh start. The race was finally halted after the seven boats had roared around two laps and the drivers were sent back to the pits to refuel.

Despite high speed, choppy water and some wind, no accidents marred the day. Paul Stanecki, of East Newark, N. J., starting in the Class B professional event by mistake when he thought it was his own Class B amateur, was flipped from his boat by the wake of another. Stanecki was pulled from the river by harbor police and taken to the pits to dry out.

New Record Set

In mile trials for today's events yesterday, Ray Feider, of Philadelphia, pushed his Jo-An II to a new world record of 46.671 miles an hour for Class D racing runabouts. The previous record was 43.902, made at Havre de Grace last July by Thomas Ehrhart, of York, Pa.

Mrs. L. Platt, Letts Triumph In Club Golf

Mrs. Landra Platt defeated Mrs. J. W. Bellen in the quarter-finals for the Chevy Chase Club's women's title yesterday, winning 1 up after 20 holes.

Mrs. F. D. Letts beat Mrs. J. B. Patterson, 2 up, to assure herself of a spot in the semifinals today against Mrs. Platt.

In other pairings, Mrs. Bishop Hill triumphed over Baroness de Gruben, 4 and 2, and Mrs. L. O. Cameron topped Susan Hacker, 2 up. Mrs. Hill and Mrs. Cameron will also meet today.

Mrs. Houcen Wins Army-Navy Meet

Mrs. L. Houcen took the ladies' Friday golf tournament over 9 blind holes, at the Army-Navy Club yesterday with a card of 52—9—43.

Mrs. M. A. Barrol and Mrs. W. S. Bone tied for second place with 44 each, as handicaps leveled the differences between Mrs. Barrol's 49 and Mrs. Bone's 51. Guest prize went to Mrs. E. Hammond, with 47.

Mrs. Barrol and Mrs. W. S. Broome tied for the putting award with 30 putts each.

Columbia Prize To Mrs. Falls

Mrs. Marian Falls won yesterday's match play against par at Columbia Club, beating out Mrs. J. P. Harper.

Mrs. J. Epperly and Mrs. J. F. Gross tied for third place. Mrs. R. A. Lacey had the largest number of pars.

Walper, Houghton Trim Diffenbaugh

In a three cornered professional golfers' match at Kenwood yesterday, Leo Walper and Al Houghton tied with scores of 65 each to defeat George Diffenbaugh, who went around the course in 70.

Tigers Capture Pennant, Tribe Fans in Riot

berg was pelted with a blizzard of overripe farm produce while chasing after Roy Weatherly's fly ball in the first inning. The umpire threatened in addition to declare out all Cleveland players who hit balls to players being pelted by the crowd. Manager Vitt, who will be replaced next season, also made a plea to the grandstands to desist, after Tebbetts was hurt.

Manager Baker started Giebell, willing to sacrifice this game, which would have shaved the Tiger lead to a single game, rather than put his star, Schoolboy Rowe, against Feller and risk not only the game, but losing Rowe for the remainder of the crucial series. But his passive strategy worked out as neatly as a similar stunt did 11 years ago when Connie Mack started Howard Ehmke in the first game of the A's-Cubs series. Ehmke won easily, striking out 13 Cubs, and the Chicago team never recovered.

Feller Off to Shaky Start

Feller, gunning for his twenty-eighth victory of his greatest season, started much more shakily than the slim unknown who opposed him. Bobby walked Dick Bartell to start the game, but a brilliant double play, Mack to Boudreau to Trosky, got him out of trouble. In the second Greenberg got a double when Weatherly lost his looper in the sun. Bobby then walked Bruce Campbell, but once again the Cleveland infield came through with a double play and contributed another before the day was over.

But the infield couldn't save Bobby in the fourth. With one gone he walked Charley Gehringer, then struck out Greenberg for the second out, but York skied one down the left-field line. Chapman backed up to the 6-foot retaining wall, leaped and bent backward, but the ball slithered off his glove and fell into the stands. It was York's thirty-third home run of the season and his most important.

Giebell was better than Feller in the clutches. After Bartell booted Mack's roller and Hemsley singled to right to open the third, Giebell struck out Feller and Chapman. In the fourth, with two outs and Bell and Keltner on with singles, he struck out Mack. In the fifth after Hemsley singled to center and Feller walked, with none out, he struck out Chapman and Boudreau. In the seventh Mack nearly tore his head off with a line drive single and Gehringer booted Hemsley's roller. Feller sacrificed the runners to third and second, but Giebell—after shaking off Catcher Billy Sullivan's signal—struck out Chapman with a great curve ball.

As Ben walked away a Cleveland fan who had saved a venerable egg for some Tiger enemy, hurled it at Chapman. Like the Cleveland team it broke with a soggy squoosh on the field.

Temple Tramples Muhlenberg, 64-7

Philadelphia, Sept. 27 (AP).—Ray Morrison made an impressive debut as head football coach at Temple University tonight as the Owls ran wild to beat Muhlenberg, 64 to 7, before 15,000.

Al Juralewicz's 8-yard run gave the Owls their first touchdown soon after the opening kickoff. A few minutes later he scored again on a 32-yard return of an intercepted aerial. A blocked kick, a 78-yard pass, and three line bucks gave the Owls a commanding 45-0 edge at the half. Muhlenberg scored on a passing attack in the third.

Navy Faces Indians To Open Season Today

12th Consecutive Meeting of Teams To Be Witnessed by Sellout Crowd of 20,000 Spectators

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 27.—The stage is set for the opening of the 1940 football campaign at the Naval Academy tomorrow afternoon, when Navy's varsity eleven will clash with William and Mary College of Williamsburg, Va., for the twelfth successive season. The Navy plebes will meet the Georgetown University freshman at 1 o'clock on the practice field. The varsity game will start at 2:30.

A sell-out crowd, approaching 20,000, will be on hand in Thompson Stadium for the debut, officials of the Navy Athletic Association said today.

The William and Mary squad of 40 players arrived this afternoon and had a workout of nearly two hours, the Middies taking the field immediately afterward. It was the first time this year that the gridders dug their cleats into the sward of the stadium field which, incidentally, has a heavy mat of grass, due to careful preparations. Signals and formation drills marked the work of the rival squads.

At least three, perhaps four, Navy youngsters will be under fire for the first time in varsity competition, according to the probable line-up announced tonight by the coaches. These are Bill Busik, halfback, and Bob Zoeller, end, known as the "Touchdown Twins," because of their prowess in aerial tactics as plebes last year; Vitucci, stalwart guard, and Johnny Harrell, quarterback, and leading blocking back.

Busik is regarded as Navy's triple threat this year, because of his ability as a passer, outside runner, and kicker. At least four Navy regulars will not be in the starting line-up on account of minor injuries. These include Capt. Dick Foster, whose place has been taken by Zoeller; Sliwka, left guard, replaced by Al Feldmeier; Dick Opp, right tackle, who has given way to Chewning, and Clic Lenz of the back field.

the one that produced both touchdowns. In this quartet were Sam Babich, at quarter; Walter Fedora, at full, and Batson and Murphy Booth, at halves.

Outstanding in the Buff and Blue line were Tackle Ed Robins, Ends Johnny Picco and Frank August and Guard Koko Kokoski. Mike Monchlovich looked well on defense, but his center passing left plenty to be desired.

Mount St. Mary's, using only 17 men, showed plenty of spirit and fight throughout the game, although they were outclassed from start to finish. The Mounts' standout player was Halfback Bill Boyle.

George Washington, kept in the hole by two bad center passes from Monchlovich and by a 15-yard clipping penalty, made only one threatening gesture toward the Mounts' goal line during the first half.

That was a 48-yard sustained drive which fizzled out on the Mounts' 25 when Asip, the visitors' quarterback, batted down a fourth-down pass from Wiliamoski intended for Welc.

Nats 'Nosed Out' By Bosox, 24-4

The fourth and fifth runs of the session scored on Joe Cronin's twenty-fourth homer of the year, shortly after a pop foul off Cronin's bat was lost in the sun by Jack Sanford near the Red Sox dugout.

In the fifth, the Red Sox really went townward. Thuman opened the inning as the Washington pitcher, and the first man he got out was himself. Ostermueller walked, Bloodworth fumbled DiMaggio's grounder, Cramer and Williams singled and Foxx drew a walk. The Red Sox then drew Krakauskas, whose first two acts were to walk Cronin and Doerr, forcing in a run. Krakky faced nine batters in the inning, walked three and gave up three hits.

Krakauskas had a two-inning lapse in the sixth and seventh, but he regained his stride in the eighth, the Red Sox scoring seven times. Manager Bucky Harris permitted Krakky to take full punishment. Among the items they crowded into the seventh inning against Krakky were doubles by Gelbert, DiMaggio and Doerr and a triple by Lupien. Krakky also contributed a wild pitch.

It was the Nats' farewell game in Boston, though not a fond one.

bomber, a squat, powerful man of 30, resuscitated Tebbetts completely. With a yell of rage and triumph, the player vaulted off his stool and hit the fan with a pip of a right to the jaw. He followed it up with a flurry of punches that sent the fan crashing to the floor while the cops looked on complacently. After Tebbetts was through with him the black Maria backed up and the bloke was carted to the nearest clink.

The basket apparently was aimed at Schoolboy Rowe, star Tiger pitcher, who was sitting next to Tebbetts on the bullpen bench.

Tebbetts will escape with nothing more serious than a lump.

Before the Tebbetts incident Umpire Summers was forced to resort to an almost unprecedented announcement and threat.

Ruse Didn't Work

The ruse of the Tiger players in coaxing the early fire of the militant ladies and gents in the leftfield stands had failed to exhaust the supply of ripe eggs, tomatoes, potatoes, apples, ears of corn, eggplants and other spawn of nearby truck gardens. This became evident on the second "out" of the game.

Roy Weatherly lifted a fly to Hank Greenberg, slugging Tiger left fielder, after Chapman had opened the game with a walk. As Hank raced over to snare the ball he was bombarded by a blizzard of fruit and vegetables. Resolutely he strode on through the barrage and somehow picked the ball out of that meteor shower—and held it.

Summers immediately called time and stalking over to the public address system microphone shrilled: "The management of the Detroit ball club will remove its team from the field if this continues. And the umpires will call every man out whenever a fly ball goes to a Detroit player and that player is interfered with." It is one of the most rarely invoked rules of the game.

Before the day had ended the better element in the big crowd had been appealed to to the extent of applauding young Floyd Giebbell, the Tiger pitcher, when he came to the plate.

A few fair-minded bleacherites, who had saved their fruit and vegetables for the latter stages of the game, even turned on the fiery Amazons in the adjacent left field stands and pelted them. But the dirt had been done, and visiting writers and fair-minded fans left the park convinced that they had borne witness to a bizarre page in baseball history.—CONSIDINE.

Son Altesse Takes 'Graw' Purse With Good Ride by Berg

Tony Steel Runs Second In Feature

Microphobia Is Third; Victor Left at Post, Recovers to Win

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 27. Jockey Mannie Berg, graduate of the Maryland half-mile ovals, gave a demonstration of the kind of horsemanship that has put him in solid on the major tracks in today's feature race, the Albemarle Purse. When the gates opened to start the mile and a sixteenth contest, Berg's mount, Son Altesse, stood up his hind legs while his rivals headed for the first turn.

Just one minute and forty-five and four-fifths seconds later, three horses drove into the finish line and the head that was in front belonged to Son Altesse. And that broad grin when the jockeys were weighing in was on the face of Berg. The A. C. C. Stable's colorbearer finished in front of E. G. Hackney's Tony Steel and K. D. Kolseth's Microphobia in a thrilling battle to the wire.

Son Altesse, which paid $9.60, was engineered into the victory by Berg's strategy at the clubhouse turn. When he got Son Altesse under way, he skimmed the rail with the Kantar colt. It was a gamble because Microphobia and Tony Steel were blocking the way along the rail. But at the turn, the leaders swung out. Berg made the most of the opportunity offered and bolted Son Altesse through the gap.

In less than a dozen jumps the colt went from last position into the lead. Berg hustled long enough to open some three lengths and then settled down to await developments from the rear of the field. Both Tony Steel and Microphobia had been restrained to the half pole. They began their bids together and, in doing so, squeezed Milk Punch back and out of contention.

The two charged on Son Altesse in midstretch. Then Berg put the colt to a hard drive. His rivals then hung, and Berg, booting for all he was worth, kept Son Altesse ahead to the wire. The judges waited for the picture, but that was a mere formality.

The daily double returned $37.40 for each $2 investment. Broiler, owned by G. L. Stryker, president of the Laurel track, caused a mild surprise by turning back Talent, the odds-on favorite in the first race. In fact, Talent had to survive a photo to hold the place money safe from Nick. Broiler paid $11.10. D. J. Sullivan's Long Lane completed the double transaction by winning the second race at a $5.50 mutuel from Flower Parade, a paddock tip, and Buckle Up.

Jenkins, Lello Signed for Bout

New York, Sept. 27 (INS).—A lightweight championship fight between Champion Lew Jenkins, of Sweetwater, Tex., and Pete Lello, of Chicago, was closed tonight when Promoter Mike Jacobs signed the pair for a scheduled 15-round match in New York on November 22.

Jacobs also revealed he had opened negotiations for a match between Max Baer, former heavyweight titleholder who kayoed Pat Comiskey in one round last night, and Light-heavyweight Champion Billy Conn for Miami Beach some time this winter.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BROILER, $11.10, $3.90, $2.80; TALENT, $2.60, $2.10; NICK, $2.20.

BROILER assumed good lead at once, was steadied until challenged in stretch, drew out when shaken up and was going easily at close. TALENT was away poorly, was rushed up on inside to reach contention and hung in final drive. NICK worked way up on outside, made mild bid in midstretch and was weakening at close. CRIMSON LANCER was hard handled and was held safe.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:47½. Off 2:48. Winner, D. J. Sullivan's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LONG LANE, $5.50, $3.20, $2.80; FLOWER PARADE, $3.40, $2.80; BUCKLE UP, $3.50.

LONG LANE drew clear at once, was steadied while setting pace and was not threatened. FLOWER PARADE was off in tangle, came to contention on outside and was held safe. BUCKLE UP was hard ridden and had no excuses. PARI SUCRE had keen early speed and faltered.

Daily Double, BROILER and LONG LANE, Paid $37.40

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:16. Off 3:17. Winner, Mrs. R. H. Heighe's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ZENANA, $11.40, $5.40, $3.90; ROYAL TEDDY, $8.00, $3.80; ANNIE ALONE, $4.10.

ZENANA, away well, improved position gradually and came with rush in straightaway to win going away. ROYAL TEDDY came wide for racing room and closed with good energy. ANNIE ALONE was rushed while setting pace and weakened in closing eighth. ROAR was closest to ANNIE ALONE'S pace and could not stay. DIZZY DAME was never prominent.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:46. Off 3:47½. Winner, Mrs. J. Y. Christmas' b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHAILLEEN, $7.20, $4.20, $2.90; WALTER LIGHT, $7.70, $4.90; FLAMING HIGH, $4.40.

SHAILLEEN, steadied while closest to early pace of DOCTOR'S NURSE, took command when asked, withstood challenge of INTERLACE and was kept to drive to end. WALTER LIGHT closed with good courage to be going fastest at close. FLAMING HIGH came from far back and showed good effort. INTERLACE was kept in on rail in slow going and faltered in closing test.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:21. Off at once. Winner, A. C. C. Stable's b. or br. c. (3), by Kantar—Her Grace. Trained by L. G. Bedwell. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:45⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SON ALTESSE, $9.60, $5.60, $3.30; TONY STEEL, $4.00, $2.60; MICROPHOBIA, $3.00.

SON ALTESSE went in air when start came, was sent along rail to first turn, slipped through to win from ten lengths out, was hustled into long lead and then steadied and held on willingly at finish under good handling. TONY STEEL was restrained early, responded when shaken up and hung right at close. MICROPHOBIA was taken in hand going to first turn, came wide for racing room and came gamely at close. MILK PUNCH was bothered after a half by MICROPHOBIA and failed to rally thereafter.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:53. Off 4:53½. Winner, W. W. Waters' b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DARBY DU, $15.90, $6.10, $3.90; NILON, $4.00, $3.00; RADIO, $3.80.

DARBY DU was outrun early, saved ground to come through on rail and wore down NILON in final drive. NILON went around leaders in sharp move to take lead, closed willingly, but could not resist winner. RADIO saved ground while setting pace, came off rail when displaced and was coming again under drive at end. SURE TOUCH was a faltering fourth. SCROOGE had no excuse.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:27. Off 5:29. Winner, J. H. C. Dear Al:

With Challedon scheduled to do his stuff, today's crowd is expected to be of capacity proportions. Racing Secretary Charles McLennan was able to scrape up only three opponents for the W. L. Brann star but the public always wants to look at a good horse, so Brother Stevens has shipped in an extra carload of hot dogs and rolls.

Defense Head Hits 'Unstable' Metal Prices

Stocks Ample, No Basis For Sharp Price Rise, Says Henderson

By the Associated Press

Leon Henderson, defense commissioner, said yesterday there was "no justification" for recent "unstable" prices in copper, zinc and lead industries.

The statement was issued by the Defense Commission. Henderson is the member of that group designated to watch price trends.

The commission's statement said:

"Mr. Henderson stated that he would be reluctant to recommend controls over these metals, but pointed out that their production and use are vital to the national defense program and their price relationship is an important factor in the general stability of prices.

"It might be advisable to have a conference of the representatives of producers and large consumers to discuss the situation openly, Mr. Henderson said, and if the apparently artificial price-supply-demand pressure continues he is prepared to make adequate suggestions to the President as to what might be done under existing law to correct the situation."

Asserting that stocks of the metals were ample, Henderson said domestic supplies could be increased, if necessary, by several means. Great Britain and Canada, he said, could supply zinc and copper needed for their army orders in this country.

The commissioner said also that zinc and copper refining capacity was on the increase and could be "readjusted" in several possible ways.

"In view of these facts there is no reason apparent now why every demand can not be met adequately," the statement said.

Capital Transit Cited for Safety At A. T. A. Session

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Sept. 27 (AP).—A. J. Boardman, Boston traction official, was elected president of the American Transit Association today at the concluding session of the annual convention.

At the same time, officials announced the Anthony N. Brady safety awards for outstanding work in accident prevention had been given to the Kansas City Public Service Co. and the Meriden division of the Connecticut company.

Certificates of honorable mention went to the Capital Transit Co. of Washington and the Interstate Power Co. of Dubuque, Iowa.

The awards are made on safety record analyses for companies in two classes—these operating in cities over 300,000 population and those in cities of lesser size.

Wallboard Plant Plans Capacity Production

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 27 (AP).—The National Gypsum Co. is about to enter capacity production at all its major wallboard plants, to fill current and expected national defense orders, President Melvin H. Baker said today.

Baker said Government estimates call for the purchase of nearly 3,000,000,000 feet of wallboard for use in building Army cantonments and air bases—twice the entire industry's 1939 production.

He also announced receipt of a new Government order for approximately 1,000,000 feet of gypsum board, in addition to a recent 5,000,000-foot order, and purchase of the Windsor Paper Mills, Inc., Newburgh, N. Y., as the company's seventeenth plant.

Exchange Markets

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—The Canadian dollar topped off the week's rally with a gain of ⅛ per cent. Money dealers said demand for industrial purposes was an important factor in the rise. The present recovery put the Dominion money at 87 United States cents, close to the price at the start of the month, when the rate weakened.

The Swiss franc rose 1-20 of a cent to 22.90 United States cents, top price for the year. The Hongkong dollar jumped more than ¼ cent to 23.22 cents. The free Argentine peso added 1-20 of a cent at 23.25 cents. Free sterling stayed at $4.03¾.

Closing rates follow (Great Britain in dollars, others in cents):

Receipts to Be Used For $210,000,000 River Aqueduct

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—The largest New York City bond issue in seven years, totaling $60,000,000, was announced today by Joseph D. McGoldrick, comptroller.

The issue, composed of serial bonds, will be offered shortly. Receips will be applied to the construction of the $210,000,000 Delaware River aqueduct which is intended to place New York City "indefinitely" beyond danger of a water shortage. Details of the bonds were not disclosed.

The last previous larger city bond issue was $70,000,000 of relief obligations in 1933.

New Axis Pact Causes Reaction In British Bonds

London, Sept. 27 (AP).—British government bonds declined after early improvement today when traders came back from an air raid interruption with news of the 10-year Axis pact.

Other sections of the market, except for Japanese loans, kept a steady footing.

The gilt-edged group closed with outside losses of ¼ point although prices had improved at the outset on fresh investment demand.

Japanese bonds were marked down 1 to 2 points. No trades were reported.

The industrial list ignored the pact announcement and finished on the whole with fractional gains. Kaffirs, especially dividend paying issues, attracted modest buying.

Elsewhere trade was listless but prices held up well.

Ontario Leaf Crop Hard Hit by Frost

Brantford, Ont., Sept. 27 (AP).—Ontario's tobacco industry is hard hit after a second serious frost Wednesday night practically wiped out all tobacco which had not been harvested. Loss was between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 pounds with a cash loss estimated at from $750,000 to $1,000,000.

The estimated 1940 crop total of 45,000,000 pounds suffered a severe blow August 23 when frost caused damage estimated at $5,000,000.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Sept. 27 (AP).—Fluctuating nervously over a range of more than a cent, wheat prices continued to drift aimlessly today in the cross currents of threatening international affairs and an artificial domestic supply situation.

The Axis-Japanese pact was partly responsible for an early setback of almost a cent, with dealers taking their cue from action of securities. Later the market reversed itself, December contracts rallying 1⅜ from the low and reaching 80⅝, best level since early in July. This reflected strength in the spot market and purchasing by consuming and processing interests.

Another sinking spell in the final minutes gave wheat a ¼ lower to ⅜ higher close compared with yesterday's finish, with December 79⅛@80 and May 79⅜@79¾. Corn was unchanged to ⅛ up, December 57½@57⅝, May 58¾; oats unchanged to ⅛ up; soy beans ⅜-½ lower; rye ⅛-¼ down and lard 5-10 lower.

Frost damage was reported in northern sections of the corn belt. Argentine shipments this week included 63,000 bushels to United States ports.

Soy beans were off a cent at one stage due to scattered profit-taking. About 200,000 bushels of rye arrived here from Duluth.

Copper List Weakest in General Stock Drop; Japan's Tie-Up With Axis Depresses Traders

New York, Sept. 27.—Signing of a Berlin-Rome-Tokyo alliance today did not burst as any surprise on a waiting world, for it was like the action of a time bomb which has been watched for a certain period of time with the assurance that eventually it would explode.

The explosion today claimed no casualties in the financial district, but it confirmed what had already been expected. No market could be expected to advance under such conditions, and that of today was not in the mood to act contrary to custom. It sold off rather sharply. The composite average lost 0.54 point, which meant losses in individual leaders of from 1 to more more than 2 points.

Trading was not active on the decline, amounting to 561,840 shares. This was a point in favor of the bullish traders, who are convinced there is nothing wrong with this market except Hitler, Mussolini, Stalin and the Japanese war machine. Wall Street is accustomed to opposition, but there is a limit. It has taken about everything in the book for seven years and it is not fooling itself about any millenium in the future, but it doesn't like the dictators to gang up all in one day.

Traders kept an eye on the metal markets, where the latest buying movement in copper, while in smaller volume, was not slowed up by any let-up in actual demand. As a matter of fact, inquiry for copper was said to be in quite as large volume as earlier in the week and smaller sales were accounted for by the disinclination of sellers to fill all orders, including new Japanese inquiry.

Japanese business was, of course, restricted by doubt over the status of the buyer as a result of the Tokyo deal with the Axis in a declared move to block United States intervention in certain Far Eastern situations. As President Roosevelt has already embargoed shipments of steel scrap, it was assumed that copper would also be placed under a ban. Indications are that Japan has already acquired large stock of copper, and despite the United States prohibition against aviation gasoline, substantial tonnage of motor fuel in recent months.

Announcement of the tighter bond between the Nazi-Fascist bloc in Europe and the Japanese militarists had a depressing effect on trader sentiment, although it had been expected for some time as one of the coordinated moves planned by Hitler and Mussolini. Whether it will have an immediately adverse effect on the British cause will depend on Japanese activity. Some believe Nippon already has plenty to do in China. Japanese bonds broke two to six points on the announcement and Norwegian obligations were off as much as nine points. On the other hand, an assortment of German liens, including industrials, marched forward three to six points.

While metal markets experienced only a minor shock from the Henderson statement, copper shares were the weakest spot in the list with seven leaders of the group winding up with an average drop of 1.43 points, including 2⅜ by American Smelting, 1⅜ by Kennecott, and a point by Anaconda. The two latter were included in the day's most active section.

Chrysler, Telephone, Johns-Manville, Loew's, Sears Roebuck, Union Carbide and Steel common were off a point or more each.

In commodity markets cotton broke 13 to 16 points. Wheat was mixed, ending ¼ lower to ¼ cent higher.

Listed bonds moved lower on the perturbing news of the arrangement between the Rome-Berlin Axis and Japan. A few foreign dollar bonds jumped sharply higher, but the trades clearly had no relation to the foreign developments. United States Treasury bonds were fractionally off, and best grade corporate bonds were similarly easy. Turnover amounted to $6,130,000, which is a fairly representative day in these times.

German municipal and corporate bonds were the only favorites of the list, and gains in such issues were quite extensive. The advances ranged from 1 to 11 points, but no comparable upswing took place in German government bonds. Italian 7s gained a fraction, but Japanese obligations fell 2 to 6 points. Australians were weak, and Canadian issues also lost ground. Bonds of the German-occupied countries showed large losses. Even the Latin-Americans were soft, despite the rapid progress of the $500,000,000 lending program.

Speculative carrier bonds had their worst day in a fortnight, as the issues tended to follow the lead of the equities division. Recessions of a point or more were common in this group. Holding company and share privilege bonds eased as related equities lost ground. International Telephone bonds remained under pressure, but American communications issues were steady.

Sugar Futures

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—Domestic sugar future traders today awaited indications of Senate action on legislation to extend the quota system beyond 1940 and final prices were unchanged to 1 point higher on sales of only 1,650 tons.

Foreign developments stirred a little interest in the world list. The market closed ½ to 2 points up on turnover of 350 tons.

March *77½, May *80½.

Raw sugar offerings remained at 2.73 cents a pound up for duty-frees.

The large local refiners continued to quote 4.35 cents a pound for fine granulated.

No. 3 range follows:

	High.	Low.	Close.
January	1.81	1.81	1.81
March	1.87	1.87	1.87
May	1.92	1.91	1.91

Cotton Futures

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—Cotton futures dropped 13 to 17 points today as long-heralded hedging pressure finally was felt.

The decline halted a rise of several weeks which had carried futures more than $1.50 a bale above Government loan levels.

Brokers said the increase in Southern offerings probably was caused by the rather wide premium of the December contract over the loan rate.

Buying interest in the textile market centered on heavy goods. Quotations on drills, twills, osnaburgs and wide sheetings advanced fractionally in response to continued brisk demand from the bag trade.

Exports Thursday, 2,362 bales; season so far, 139,238; port receipts, 47,092; port stocks, 2,824,085. Range follows:

	Open	High	Low	Close
October	9.69	9.70	9.51	9.52 —13
December	9.68	9.69	9.51	9.53 —13

Spot, nominal; middling (11-inch), 9.91. *Nominal.

New York Dry Goods

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—Reports from the goods market today indicated that large Government defense orders and the strength in wool tops has stimulated civilian demand for woolen goods. Trade in sweaters and blankets was said to be the heaviest in years.

Traders also reported improved demand in standard rayon fabrics. Volume of gray goods business was light, since buyers were not inclined to raise bids. Silk goods trade was inactive.

MR. AND MRS. — Breaking It to Her Gently — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL AND ELLISON HOOVER

SAY, SEEMS TO ME YOU SPEND MOST OF YOUR TIME KNITTING
OF COURSE, I'M DOING MY BIT FOR THE REFUGEES
HAVE YOU ADOPTED A WHOLE FAMILY OF 'EM?
NO—BUT IT TAKES ME AN AWFUL LONG TIME TO KNIT A SWEATER
SOME WOMEN CAN KNIT AND TALK TOO, BUT I CAN'T YOU'RE DOING ALL RIGHT
SAY, DO YOU S'POSE IF I SAID I WAS A REFUGEE, YOU COULD DARN ME A COUPLE OF PAIR OF SOCKS?

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER.

Grin and Bear It — By Lichty

"But, darling—why do I need a cook book when all the directions are on the can?"

Listen! with Glynn

A great many radio programs come and go, reach peaks and go down to depths, never to be heard from again. All sorts of innovations are tried and found wanting, all sorts of campaigns are started to popularize them. But if they don't please the public, they don't last.

Apropos of that, there are some that come along in which none of these high-powered tactics are used. They're just plain, good entertainment and with no outside help they get along very well and are to be found on your radio dial year after year in the same spot.

One of them is "Saturday Night Serenade," which you hear over WJSV at 8:45 p. m., and which is celebrating its fifth anniversary on the Columbia network tonight. With Gus Haenschen's Orchestra, Soprano Mary Eastman and Tenor Bill Perry as its musical presentations, it hasn't changed since the day of its debut. And it's doing very well, as you can see from the fact that its sponsor keeps on sponsoring it.

The formula, as explained by Director Haenschen, seems simple enough: "People like 'Saturday Night Serenade,' I think, because we offer them real variety. We try to appeal to listeners of varied musical tastes, giving them a tuneful blending of the best ballads of yesterday, the popular hits of today and a generous portion of good dance rhythm."

Contract Bridge

1. In a certain suit, dummy has A 9 2 and declarer holds K J 6 4 3. How should this suit be played so as to lose no more than one trick?

♡ Q J 9
◇ K J 3 2
♣ 9 8 7 4

The bidding has proceeded thus:

South	West	North	East
Pass	1 NT.	Pass	3 ♠
Pass	3 NT.	Pass	4 ◇
Pass	4 ♠	Pass	6 ♠
Pass	Pass	Dbl.	Pass
Pass	Pass

What do you lead?

3. Sitting South, you hold these cards:

♠ Q 7 3
♡ 6 5 2
◇ 7 4 3
♣ 6 5 3 2

The bidding has gone:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Dbl.	Redbl.	?

What action do you take?

4. Defending a suit contract, and following to the first two rounds of trumps, your partner first plays the four and then the two. What is he trying to tell you?

Answers to Quiz

1. Play the king, then lead a small card. If next hand follows, finesse the nine. It may lose, but the suit has now broken 3—2. This paly guards against four to the queen-ten on your left.

2. The two of diamonds. The double of a slam by the player not on lead is lead directing. In this particular case dummy has bid no suit other than trumps. The four aces' interpretation of this is to open the first side suit bid by declarer. In the Culbertson system the double calls for "an unnatural opening."

3. Bid two clubs. A pass would tell your partner that you believe the contract can be defeated. A take-out of one no-trump would show far greater strength than you possess.

4. He is trying to tell you that he has at least one more trump, and might be able to use it for ruffing.

MAKE READINESS TO DEPART... YOU GO SOON FOR SPY QUESTIONS BY HONORABLE ARMY ON MAINLAND!
OHHH! IF YOU'RE GOING TO DO SOMETHING, BOYS, NOW'S THE TIME!
PAT!! ACTIVITY IN THE VILLAGE! ONE JUNK SHOVING OFF -ANOTHER GETTING READY!
BATTLE STATIONS, ME BRAVE BUCKOS! ... RUN UP THE ENSIGN!
LET'S RIDE!
THE ONE THING THOSE FISHERMEN REALLY FEAR IS A NATURAL DISTURBANCE! ...THERE'S A STICK OF DYNAMITE IN EACH STACK OF WOOD—AND A DRY GRASS FUSE 'ROUND THE CIRCLE! WE'LL GIVE 'EM THE BEST PHONY VOLCANO THIS SIDE OF HOLLYWOOD!
MILTON CANIFF

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — BY DALE ALLEN

WHAT ON EARTH GIVES YOU THE IDEA THAT I'D TAKE A COMMON TRAMP INTO MY HOME? GET OUT, BEFORE I CALL THE POLICE!
I'M NOT A COMMON TRAMP, MRS. WORTH..
AND YOU'LL NOT CALL THE STURDY BLUECOATS, AFTER I WHISPER A LITTLE SECRET INTO YOUR STARTLED EAR! LISTEN...
NOW! MRS. MARY WORTH! WILL YOU PREPARE MY ROOM?
YES.. JUST.. LET ME.. HAVE A MOMENT TO ...THINK!
DALE

MICKEY FINN — Action Ahead! — BY LANK LEONARD

SO INSPECTOR KLIPP IS JUST AS BIG A HEEL AS THE BOYS SAY HE IS, EH, MICKEY?
HE SURE IS, TOM—AND TODAY I'M GOING TO BE WITH HIM ALONE—IT'S JOHNNY BIFFALICK'S DAY OFF!
HANG AROUND THE LOBBY, FINN, UNTIL I WANT YA!
YESSIR!
GEE, THIS BEIN' A DETECTIVE AIN'T AS EXCITIN' AS I THOUGHT IT WOULD BE!
OH, YOU'LL GET PLENTY OF ACTION—I'VE HEARD JOHNNY BIFFALICK SAY THAT THINGS POP WHEN YOU LEAST EXPECT 'EM!
BELL CAPTAIN
WHERE'S THE HOUSE DETECTIVE? I'VE GOTTA TALK WITH HIM, QUICK!!

DIXIE DUGAN — The Story — BY J. P. McEVOY AND H. J. STRIEBEL

STEVE IS A SHOE-MAKER BY TRADE
YES'M —AN' A BUSY MAN I AM—
—I MAKE SHOES FER TH' HULL VILLAGE!
WHAT A LOT OF FEET!
I STARTED THIS HIDDEN VALLEY WITH STEVE—
FROM THE GROUND UP EH?
YES,M—
-AN' THIS IS HOW IT WERE DONE
NEXT WEEK THE MYSTERY OF THIS HIDDEN VALLEY OF OLD PEOPLE WILL BE REVEALED!

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Mute Appeal — BY FRANK MARTINEK

AS THE HEAVILY-WEIGHTED BARREL CRASHES DOWN AGAINST A JAGGED EDGE OF A SUNKEN WRECK WINSLOW'S BODY IS FREED
A MOMENT LATER IT POPS ABOVE THE SURFACE—
BUT—HALF DROWNED—STILL HELPLESS FROM THE POWERFUL DRUG—WINSLOW IS UNABLE TO STAY AFLOAT
MORE TO THE LEFT—THERE, THAT'S THE SPOT! SEE THOSE RIPPLES? I TELL YOU THERE IS SOMETHING THERE IN THE WATER!
PNL

IN THE KISMET CAFE', BAKDORE'S LEADING PLACE OF ENTERTAINMENT
WAITER! WHAT'S ALL THE EXCITEMENT?
AH, SAHIB! THE MANAGER HAS JUST HAD WORD THAT THE RAJAH HIMSELF WILL BE HERE TONIGHT—AND NETAH, HIS FAVORITE DANCING GIRL, WILL PERFORM!
SOUNDS INTERESTING! I'LL STICK AROUND!
AH! BUT IT WILL BE COSTLY! TONIGHT OUR PRICES, NATURALLY, WILL BE TEN TIMES THE USUAL TARIFF!
IN THAT CASE, SO LONG! THIS IS NO PLACE FOR A GUY WITH A CAVIAR APPETITE AND A STALE BREAD BANK-ROLL!
IS NETAH DOOMED TO FAIL IN HER DARING ATTEMPT TO GET STEVE'S HELP FOR WAHOO?

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

CRANE IS LIABLE TO SEAL THOSE INDIANS IN THE MINE TO COVER UP HIS CRIME! I'VE GOT TO STOP HIM!
I'M GOING WITH YOU, KING!
PULL UP, KID, WE'LL HAVE TO BLINDFOLD AND LEAD OUR HORSES ACROSS THAT TRESTLE!
KING—THE ORE TRAIN! IT'S COMING BACK!
CRANE MEANS TO RUN US DOWN!—JUMP, KID—JUMP!

Workmen Uncover Burial Ground in Wooded Tract

Workmen excavating for extension of Forty-second street through a wooded tract at Albemarle street northwest have uncovered a number of unmarked graves estimated at more than 100 years.

The new street will run adjacent to burial grounds of the Eldbrooke M. E. Church at Murdock Mill road and River road northwest, but church officials were mystified over the old graveyard unearthed by excavators.

The ancient burial grounds were apparently established many years before the present Eldebrooke Cemetery and grave markers have long since disappeared.

Federal Workers School Plans Course on the War

The Federal Workers School fall term will open at 5 p. m. Monday, October 7, and will include a new course—"War, Its Causes and Relationships."

Students may register on any weekday between 4 p. m. and 6 p. m. in the building at 532 Seventeenth street northwest.

New courses this year will include legal research, taught by David Cohen and Albert Gerber, of the REA legal division; War, Its Causes and Relationships, taught by John T. Fishburn, of the State Department; History of the American People, taught by Dr. Daniel Schwaetz, London School of Economics; Latin-American Labor Policy, taught by Miss Katherine Lewis, daughter of John L. Lewis, C. I. O. president, and drawing, taught by Betty Shotwell and Lenny Korsakov, Washington illustrators.
